OUTCOME OF GIANT SOLOMON BATTLE UNCLEAR, SAYS KNOX

WILLKIE PUTS WAR POLICY UNDER FIRE

Charges FDR's Conduct of Conflict Gives Allies 'Boasts and Promises.'

RENEWS 'FRONT' PLEA

Demands U. S. Diplomats 'Big Enough to Tell President the Truth.'

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—President Roosevelt's conduct of the war was under fire today from Wendell L. Willkie, who charged that our "superb fighting Allies" are getting boasts and promises instead of help.

Willkie's complaints were largely in behalf of Soviet Russia and China. He said American diplomats should be appointed who are big enough in their own right to dare to tell our president the truth."

A nation-wide radio audience last night heard the 1940 Republican presidential nominee report to the people upon his 49-day flight around the world.

Willkie reiterated his plea for a second front in Europe and for dispatch of forces to India for all-out attack on Burma to relieve, respectively, the embattled Russians and Chinese. Then he went considerably further than that.

He argued that we are fighting not merely our enemies but for a new world idea, a new freedom which will see the orderly abolition of the colonial system and for a new society, world-wide in scope. That new world, he said, would be free alike of the economic injustices of the west and of the political malpractices of the east. He said the people he visited were looking for partnership with us in realizing those aspirations.

"Our western world and our presumed supremacy are now on trial," he said. "Our boasting and our big talk leave Asia cold."

Willkie expressed disappointment at the failure to get more of our men and war weapons where they are needed. He said we were not doing a good job in many respects, he denounced "stupid, arbitrary and undemocratic censorship."

There were, of course, exceptions and Willkie reported that he had seen American tanks and planes fighting magnificently and had seen the beginnings of the shipping routes which some time

Hear Details Of 3-Day Commando 'Blitz' On City

The plan of attack for a three-day blitzkrieg over Mansfield beginning Nov. 9 will be outlined before Commando majors and captains at a Community War Chest strategy meeting at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Necessity for success in the Commandos double-barreled appeal, "For home and country—give an hour's pay each month" will be discussed by Fred B. Hout, major general, before more than 200 majors and captains.

The session is the first in a series which precede the opening of the intensive invasion of Mansfield when Commando divisions will strike out to reach an objective of $140,377 in cash and pledges. The money will support 11 war chest agencies and 11 Community Fund agencies.

All Commandos will meet Thursday, Nov. 5, to get "final orders" at John Simpson auditorium.

Meanwhile today, a special Com-

Baseball Enthusiasm Stays With Kentuckian At 107.

CYNTHIA, Ky. —(AP)— Charles Rieckel, who claims to be the oldest baseball fan in America and recently a great-great-great grandfather, quietly observed his 107th birthday anniversary today.

Until the last year or so, Rieckel seldom had missed an opening National league baseball game at Cincinnati in 40 years.

City Meets Coffee Curb Cheerfully

'Anything for Victory' Principal Comment on Rationing.

Mansfielders won't do much complaining even if they will be inconvenienced by coffee rationing, a consensus of opinion gleaned from statements of representative citizens revealed today.

Nation-wide rationing is due to start after midnight Nov. 28 after cessation of all sales on Nov. 21, preparatory to its inauguration. All persons over 15 years of age will be allotted one pound every five weeks, and there is little likelihood that this amount will be increased in the near future, according to price administration spokesmen.

Typical of the opinions expressed was one woman's statement, "we'll have to skimp—but anything for victory!" Another, a navy mother, said "we should worry about coffee as long as our son has milk to drink." Other comments were: "You can get along on anything if you have to," and "any good American is willing to do without some things."

The first ration of coffee may be purchased by use of stamp No. 27 in the sugar ration book. They will then be used in the order, 27, 28, 25, 26 and so on. Use of stamp 28 first, as was previously announced by the price administration office, is inconvenient because of the arrangement of the stamps in the book.

Estimates as to just how much coffee is obtainable from a pound ranged widely, depending quite largely on the strength to which the consumer is accustomed and the quality of the coffee used. Rationing headquarters placed the figure at 45 cups per pound.

Miss Elizabeth Bay, Richland county demonstration agent, was inclined to believe the average once-a-day coffee drinker would be little inconvenienced.

Common substitutes such as tea and coffee are still available in Mansfield and other Richland county towns although some grocers are limiting per customer sales to forestall a shortage. Sale of these articles however, in most local stores continues to exceed the amount the grocers may buy. Many grocers expect these items, and perhaps some others including spices may have to be placed

WON'T FORGET

Eden Tells Mrs. FDR British Will Always Be Grateful.

LONDON —(U.P.)— Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, at a reception for Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, said today that we shall never forget the aid America gave Britain "in the darkest times."

"We like to think," Eden said, "that among our qualities is that we remember our friends and we remember especially those who stood by us in the darkest times.

"We shall never forget and never cease to be grateful." Eden pledged Britain to a better understanding with Americans and Mrs. Roosevelt replied that "I am sure our young people will know more about England."

SPENDS LOOT

Girl, 17, Held In Theft of Four $1,000 Bills.

TOLEDO —(INS)— A 17-year-old girl was held today by Toledo police for investigation after she confessed she had stolen $4,000 in $1,000 bills from a friend's home in Denver, Colo. Her arrest climaxed a five-day spending spree.

In her hotel room were found dresses and other apparel, including an expensive fur coat. She had only $10 when taken into custody, but police said they obtained $1,300 from a cigar store safe where the girl had asked a clerk to keep the money for her.

City Joins Nation In Navy Day Tribute; Parade At 7 P. M.

Mansfielders joined with other Americans at home today to pay tribute to their fighting sea forces in a nation wide observance of the first wartime Navy day which in Mansfield marks the first day of the "300 For Victory" recruiting drive.

During the first three hours this morning eight boys made application for the navy and one was accepted, Chief Petty Officer Charles Scholtz, in., of the local recruiting office said.

Highlight of the Navy day program will be a parade with more than 450 persons participating from local civic organizations led by the American Legion drum corps, Senior high school band and CIO No. 711 band. Activity will begin at 7 p. m. when the parade forms at Park avenue west and Bowman street to start the march from Park avenue, north on Mulberry street, east on Fourth street, and south on Main street to Central park.

Special speaker for the park program will be Lieut. Albert Heiser, who spoke also for the joint luncheon of the Rotary, Lions, Co-operative, Optimists and Gyro clubs this noon in the Mansfield-Leland hotel. Navy Mothers' club members were luncheon guests.

Already enthusiastic comments have come from those who saw the first noon showing of free talking motion pictures of navy life to be presented again at 2, 4 and 6 p. m. in the R. E. Moorhead sales room on Park avenue west. Another presentation is scheduled after the parade this evening.

Meanwhile in Washington President Roosevelt, in a Navy day message to Secretary Frank Knox said the American people "Have the most profound faith in their navy's ability to sweep our enemies from the seas."

Mercury Drop to 17-Year Low Brings Trace of Snow.

Mansfielders today were being thankful that so far there are no priorities on long underwear as they shivered their way to work in a below-freezing temperature of 23 degrees and a visible snowfall around 9 a. m. betokened deeper things to come.

Weather records revealed the day to be the coldest Oct. 27 in a 17-year local history, with government observers in Cleveland reporting a temperature drop last night to 10 degrees above zero, with a rise by daylight to 25.

The highest local recording during the 24 hours ending at noon was 49, for a 24-hour average of 36 and a 17-year average of 46.4. At noon the temperature stood at the freezing mark—32 degrees.

Ensemble Combines Skill And Humor, Leaves 1,000 Pleased

By KEN WOODMAN

Using two "streamlined" white maple harps, a 'cello, and a flute the Salzedo ensemble got Mansfield's current Civic Music series off to an auspicious start last night at John Simpson auditorium.

Less an "ensemble" than a group of four competent solo artists who seemed to have a lot of fun concertizing together, the musicians won the complete approval of an audience of more than 1,000.

In the interest of good programming they opened and closed the concert with ensemble numbers. From the start, in Handel's Suite in D, all four demonstrated their thorough musicianship; but it was the fourth movement of the suite, marked Allegro and the succeeding charming musette and quaintly rhythmic Marche that lifted the concert from an intellectual level and stirred the listeners to noticeable emotional enjoyment.

Debussy's Children's Corner, the final number on the program list, was one with humor and skill; and the familiar Golliwog's Cake Walk which closes the suite was performed with an added touch of showmanship that made it a concert highlight particularly for younger members of the audience.

The ensemble kept this mood in the succeeding encore—David Guion's Harmonica Player. Deftly, the musicians closed the concert on a more sober but equally pleas-

2 MANSFIELD MEN ON WASP

Lieut. Harrington, Paul Kopchok, Reported Missing Last Week, Were on Carrier.

Two Mansfield mothers, advised last week that their sons were missing in action in the far Pacific still clung to ebbing hopes today that their boys still lived as the navy department made public the sinking, Sept. 15 of the U. S. airplane carrier Wasp by a Japanese submarine torpedo.

Mrs. George Kopchok, 756 North Bowman street, said her son Paul, pharmacist's mate, whom the navy department listed as missing in a message to the family last Thursday, had been assigned to the work.

Mrs. Mabel L. Harrington, 178 Carpenter road, mother of Lieut. Fred C. Harrington, radio officer of the Wasp, today is the object of condoling thoughts expressed by his sister, Mrs. W. E. Hahne, with CAIRO — (AP) — Slashing forward in hand-to-hand fighting under cover of darkness and beating off desperate Axis counterattacks by day, the army of the Nile has penetrated Field Marshal Rommel's main positions and widened a road for tank attack through enemy minefields, battlefront dispatches reported today.

(By Associated Press)

CAIRO — The British Eighth army, blasting its way through the mine-strewn Axis defense lines on the El Alamein desert front to open a passage for tanks and introduce a new phase in the grim struggle, has extended its hold on enemy ground and held firm against increasing Axis pressure, an Allied communique said.

The bitter fighting, on the land and in the air, is continuing, the joint British headquarters-RAF communique said. Eighteen Axis planes were reported destroyed.

United States air squadrons gave strong support to the British and Allied land forces in yesterday's desert fighting. In one instance two important Axis concentrations forming for a counter-attack were broken up by continuous shuttle attacks by American planes.

Ranging out over Field Marshal Rommel's supply lines on the Mediterranean, Allied bombers attacked a convoy off Tobruk and saw one tanker burst into flames and a large merchant vessel blown up after hits by bombs and aerial torpedoes.

Long-range Allied fighters shot down two German escort planes after an attack on the convoy.

STARTS INQUIRY

State to Begin Probe of China Shop Blaze Today.

Gayle H. Owens, assistant state fire marshall, was expected in Mansfield today to begin an investigation of the fire which early Sunday destroyed the Hostess China shop at Orchard Park, U. S. Route 42, near Lexington.

Merchandise valued at $1,000 was lost in the blaze which Sheriff Frank E. Robinson and deputies believe was started to conceal burglary of the place. The nearby restaurant of Mrs. Anna Meredith, who also owned the burned building, was burglarized at about the same time and the Kell Hardware, in downtown Lexington, was broken into Friday night.

Evidence showed that the fire at the china shop started on a rear porch. This further confirmed the theory that the blaze was of incendiary origin, authorities said.

Navy Reveals Wasp Sinking, Other Losses

Japs Suffer Damage To Two Carriers, Three Fighting Ships, Lose 21 Planes In Terrific Air, Sea Conflict Near Guadalcanal.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Two new bombing raids on Japanese installations, including a submarine base, on Kiska island in the Aleutians were reported by the navy today. The reference to the submarine base was the first mention of such an enemy installation in the island chain reaching westward from Alaska. However, the navy on several previous occasions had mentioned enemy submarines operating in the Aleutians area.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Navy Secretary Knox said today "the issue has been joined" in the battle of the Solomons and that the "Japs have a lot of strength," but the "outcome is not clear."

One day after the sinking of the aircraft carrier Wasp was announced, Knox said that the navy was "putting up a gamer fight" than at any time in its history.

"I am not foreshadowing the results," he told his press conference, "and I am certainly not foreshadowing defeat."

The secretary described the campaign in the Solomons as a war of attrition in response to requests for any comment he could make on frequent arrival of Japanese reinforcements.

All indications today were that the Japanese, goaded by continual bombing and a realization that their march of conquest had stalled, were throwing everything they have into a frenzied drive to crack the Allied front in the southwest Pacific.

Loss of the 14,700-ton $20,737,000 Wasp on Sept. 15 was disclosed by the navy last night shortly before it was announced that a full scale attack was roaring around the

FDR Orders 25 Aircraft Carriers

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt today signed a $15,000,000,000 appropriation and contract authorization bill which contains funds for more than 14,000 naval planes and authorizes construction of 500,000 tons of aircraft carriers. This would provide for around 25 carriers.

Japs Claim Sinking of Six U. S. Warships In Big Solomons Battle

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Japanese broadcast today their version of a big naval and air battle yesterday in the Solomon islands area, claiming the sinking of six United States warships, including four aircraft carriers, one battleship and another ship of unidentified type.

The announcement said that American casualties also included another battleship, three cruisers and a destroyer heavily damaged.

These claims were without confirmation from American sources. Japanese communiques issued after the Midway and Coral sea battles included similar claims which proved to be considerably exaggerated.

Comparatively minor losses were acknowledged by the Japanese, who said that they suffered slight damage to only two of their aircraft carriers and a cruiser in the engagement.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Secretary of the Navy Knox said today that an Axis claim of having sunk four aircraft carriers and a battleship north of the Santa Cruz islands, near the Solomons, was "another one of their fishing expeditions."

AVENGERS: Fliers From Wasp In Thick Of Solomons Battle

(By United Press)

PEARL HARBOR—Fliers of the aircraft carrier Wasp are in the thick of the Solomons fighting, avenging the loss of their ship and their mates, Capt. Forrest P. Sherman, skipper of the sunken warship, disclosed today in telling his own story of the tragedy.

Sherman, now chief of staff to Vice-Admiral John H. Towers, commander of the Pacific air forces, said three torpedoes struck the Wasp forward.

Fire broke out and the carrier became an inferno as it spread to the Wasp's fuel and ammunition stores. After an hour and 20 minutes, it became necessary to abandon ship.

Most of the crew was saved, it was announced. Sherman said those of the Wasp's fliers who were in the air when the carrier was hit flew to shore bases or to other ships and still are operating in the Solomons.

He said one of his squadron commanders had been responsible for damaging or destroying several Japanese ships in recent actions.

He disclosed also that Jack Singer, International News Service correspondent previously reported missing in action, had been killed when one of the torpedoes struck near the Wasp's washroom.

"A strong enemy task force came down Sept. 14. It appeared north of San Cristobal

Formality In Services Now More Popular

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The hurried marriages of a year ago have slowed down in tempo. Girls and their soldier fiances realize that unless a miracle happens we're likely to be in this war for a long time,

Therefore, they reason, why get married as if one were snatching a sandwich at a quick-lunch counter? Why not respond to the beautiful words of the marriage ceremony with the dignity they imply?

The way today's correspondent feels about her wedding is, I think, typical. She wants to have a ceremony she and her soldier fiance can always remember with pride. She writes:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My mother is disgusted with me because I'm going to pack my wedding outfit in a suitcase —lovely white crepe dress, finger-length veil, white satin slippers —and travel halfway across the continent to marry the finest boy in the United States Army.

"Mother thinks George should get a furlough and come to our home in Massachusetts to be married. She doesn't realize that when a man's in the army, a furlough for wedding bells cannot be depended on. She argues: 'If you are going to do this mad thing —travel halfway across the United States to be married — wait a couple of months until I can afford to go with you, and cut out all that foolishness about being married in white bridal finery.'

"But that 'foolishness' is just what I wouldn't cut out for anything. George may be ordered overseas, and thinking of all the things likely to happen to a soldier, I believe it will help a lot if he remembers what a nice wedding we had.

"We're more than fortunate in knowing one of the officers stationed at the same post as George, and Captain B—is going to get his cousin's wife, who lives in a nearby town, to be on hand. After the ceremony in church, she is going to give us a reception at her home, with a real wedding cake.

"Mother does not approve of any of the arrangements, says Captain B's cousin by marriage is a stranger to us. So, in spite of marrying George, with whom I've been in love for two years, and a chance of a couple of days honeymoon, I've shed some tears over mother's grouches. Don't you think, considering the circumstances, I'm doing the right thing?

"BRIDE-TO-BE."

I do think you're doing the right thing. Suppose you did wait until the family finances warranted your mother's going along as chaperon. By that time your fiance might be on his way overseas, and there wouldn't be any wedding at all. Would you ever forgive yourself?

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Oct. 28.

The Lunar transits for this day point to much initiative and enterprise with the energies and faculties keyed up to high purpose and worthwhile ambitions. These enthusiasms, however, may lack the support or endorsement of employers, supervisors or others whose cooperation may seem necessary. Determination, persistent and constructive effort should win out to profitable and gratifying goals, with expanded finances, increase of popularity, and business and social prestige.

Those whose birthday it is are faced by a year in which their major ambitions and objectives may have to be put over by their own indomitable will, skill, practical constructive ability and enthusiasm, as there is little hope of assistance or encouragement from outsiders, employers, superiors or those in a financial position to promote worthy enterprise and initiative. However, with resolution and sound tactics there should be lucrative returns financially and enhanced personal popularity in business and socially. There may be urges to overspend.

A child born on this day should have much enterprise, ingenuity and constructive ability, with high ambitions to put over worthwhile projects. Its own force of character should carry it to success.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I turned back to Mary, putting my fingers on her wrist with gentle pressure, as Katharine taught me to awaken a sleeper, but Mary did not move a muscle, nor respond as I called her name loudly. I grasped her shoulders and shook her, but in vain.

"She's completely under," my father decided. "How about Noel? he asked, as Dicky came in.

"All out," my husband answered. "He couldn't hear the last trump if old Gabe were sounding it. But he's all right, I'm sure."

"So am I," my father said, "but I'll have to have a doctor's verdict before I'm satisfied. Where's Twitchell?" He turned to Adams imperatively.

"Milner took him along. The doctor wouldn't permit Redfield to be moved without a stretcher."

"Where are they?"

"In suite 1522. Milner said if you wanted to know anything about Redfield you could call him there."

"Nice of him," my father drawled, near to a verbal explosion. "I'll call him presently. First, I want to find out all I can from you. How did you know these two had been given a sedative?"

Warns Of Spying.

Adams shot a quick glance toward the other suite.

"I'm going to whisper," he said. "It wouldn't be so good if Milner should happen to come back—he has a key you know—and find me shooting off my mouth."

"All right," my father said, lowering his voice. "go ahead."

"Was there a coffee pot in the sitting room?"

"I didn't notice," my father said. "There wasn't one near the bed. Did you see one, Richard?"

"Not I, but I wasn't looking for one. I was busy with Noel."

"It wouldn't be near the bed," I said. "I'll look."

Finds Coffee On Tray.

"Don't touch anything," father said with an imperative note, "and come back here as soon as you have looked closely."

I hurried into the other room, stopped an instant by the couch, went on to the coffee table and to listen to Noel's breathing, then noted that a hotel tray was on it. Completing my mental inventory, but touching nothing, I hurried back.

"There's a tray on the table," I said, "of the kind room service sends up. On it are a coffee pot, a cream pitcher partly filled, a small silver plate with two lumps of sugar on it, two cups and saucers, with perhaps a spoonful of creamed coffee in each, and a plate holding a few tiny biscuits and cookies."

"Good!" my father commented. "You couldn't tell whether there was any coffee left in the coffee pot?"

"You told me not to touch anything," I replied warily, not knowing whether he was testing my obedience, or had forgotten what he had said to me.

Evidence Removed.

"So I did," he said. "Well, I'll look at it, and smell it, now."

"You'll be wasting your time, sir," Adams said respectfully, but in a whisper.

"How's that?" my father asked.

"Because," Adams said, Milner took good care of that. He switched the trays, after he was sure they both were safely under."

"You mean Milner drugged them?" my father asked. "How could he manage that, with Dr. Twitchell in the room?"

Liver Birds a Menu Feature

By BETSY NEWMAN

EVERY HOME manager is watching (or should be) for vitamin-rich, mineral-wealthy foods to serve her family. Liver contains vitamins A and B—thiamine and riboflavin—and the iron and copper needed to build blood and avoid anemia. Try Liver Birds as a change from the usual liver and bacon.

Today's Menu

Liver Birds	Baked Potatoes
Mashed Squash	Waldorf Salad
Maple Bread Pudding	Tea

Liver Birds

1 lb lamb, pork, beef or calves' liver
Bacon

Have liver cut in long, narrow slices, wash, drain and dry. Lay a slice of bacon on each slice and roll with bacon on the outside. Fasten with toothpicks and sprinkle lightly with flour. Brown quickly in hot bacon drippings, then place in baking dish and nearly cover with meat stock or hot water. Cover pan and bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 30 to 40 minutes. Season with pepper, lift rolls carefully to hot platter, and thicken gravy slightly with flour. Serve very hot.

Maple Bread Pudding

2 c. bread cubes (3 slices)
2 egg yolks
¾ c. maple syrup or cane syrup
1½ c. water
1½ c. irradiated evaporated milk
2 egg whites
Few grains salt

Beat egg yolks, add maple syrup, water, milk and bread cubes. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry, then fold in bread mixture. Pour into buttered baking dish, set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until set—about 1 hour. Serves 6.

Train Boys and Girls In Home Responsibilities

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

What the average child in the United States lacks most, perhaps, in his upbringing is proper training to share the everyday responsibilities of his home, and this lack is far more serious with boys, as a rule, than girls. Among the numerous reasons for this lack are these:

1. His parents may have servants who not only do practically all the work about the home but also wait on him hand and foot.

2 It may not occur to the parents that sharing in the home duties and responsibilities is essential to a child's moral growth.

3. Wishing to see their child happy "here and now" and have as much freedom as his playmates, many parents, supposing they are being kind, are inclined not to expect much help about the home from children.

Other Causes.

4. A large number of parents who really believe their child, say of 12 or 15, should, as a matter of family justice and character education, help with the home chores, just don't succeed in getting the youngster to help. These parents find it easier to do all the work themselves than to train their child to assist By this time the child's resistance to such cooperation may be very strong. The parent probably was too late in beginning the training and not too skillful in effecting it

5. Then, too, the American atmosphere has been charged with the doctrine that the child should do only what he feels like doing and that good parents always motivate the child to help at home—just make him like to help. Ever so many parents who desire to seem modern and progressive are trying to make this philosophy work. Yet it doesn't work, and before many of these parents realize it won't work, the child has grown beyond the age when helping sufficiently at home can be effectively required of him.

6. Lingering in the muscles, bones and the nervous systems of many parents, especially fathers, is the time-worn notion that boys should not do housework—make beds, sweep, wash dishes and the like.

Rules For Parents.

1. Begin early. Train the child as soon as he is able, to care for himself. Teach self-reliance.

2. Try to make helping at home as pleasant as possible but face reality and require certain definite jobs of the boy or girl at home as soon as he is old enough to do them.

3. Let the boy take his place with his sister (or alone) with the dishpan or broom.

4. Add new jobs only after the old ones are done well as routine. Make each job inescapable, using effective penalties if necessary, but not scolding. Be reasonable.

5. When the child volunteers to help, be very appreciative. Let him also do some things he would like to do, such as he can do, but usually are done only by adults.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. Would you punish a toddler to make him come to you when you called him?

A. No; nor would I run after him. Instead I would go calmly to him and get him and, if he resisted, would talk of some of his experiences, or items of his favorite stories, hoping that he would gradually comply and cooperate.

Q Please give some rules for preventing and correcting eating scenes in the young child.

A. 1. Neither show nor feel any emotion about the child's eating. 2. Serve one food at a time and in very small portion. 3. When this is refused, end the meal then and there, seeing that the child can get no other food till the next regular meal time. 4. Continue in this manner until desired results are had. 5 In case the child holds out for more than four successive meals, or develops nausea, call the doctor. My special bulletin on cultivating a healthy appetite and solving eating problems may be had by writing me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Hands Need Attention In Wartime

By MME. QUI VIVE

Garden workers agree as one individual that this has been a tough summer on hands. Also, with so many men away, women have been messing with paint pots, doing odd jobs they never did before. Factory workers find that their nails break easily. Not that all this matters so terribly much, but one might as well make an effort to keep the hands in order. Neglected, they soon grow old-looking.

We'll say this to the sisters: wring your hands. Wring them, not in a state of despair, but in a nice lathering of cold cream, lanoline, or cocoabutter—they're all soothing. This treatment should be done twice a week, all the year round, in the summer to keep discolorations from forming, in cold weather to avoid a chapped condition.

Don't forget that much of the renovating work is done by the friction necessary to force the oils into the flesh. It is so with the care of the complexion, don't just spread on your favorite cosmetic; that's not enough—the skin surface should be tapped and slapped to tone tissues and to accelerate the blood streams. Takes only a few minutes. Keep on applying more cream. If the skin is dry it will lap it up as a kitten laps up milk, be the better for it.

Hands should be smooth, of good coloring and texture, and they should be under control. The movements of the hands are significant. They can be awkward or graceful. The befuddled little flapper doesn't know what to do with hers. The cultured woman knows precisely how her white butterflies should behave. She holds them in her lap, fingers entwined. She poses them on chair arms. Her gestures are restrained.

Put yours through a course. Lift your arm, do a hand wave. Move your fingers one after the other. Is the wrist flexible? It should be, must be if the movements of the hand are to be easy, pleasing to the eye.

Hold the hands on a level with the elbow, palms upward Fold in the fingers, one after another, beginning with the little one That exercise will be helpful, if you are a bit muscle bound from hard work.

When massaging the hands with a cream, thumb each finger from palm to finger tip—front, sides and back. When treating the backs of the fingers, do little circles on each joint. Rub the cream into the finger nails. That practice will keep them from breaking and showing ridges. Continue treatment to the elbow. Give the elbow its portion of the soothing emolient.

Home girls must avoid harsh cleaning agents. When polishing silver or furniture, cotton gloves should be worn Furniture polish is tough on mitts. Protection is half the battle.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TRYING TO NIP A SLAM

DEFENSE against a constructively bid slam contract should be concentrated solely upon the best chance to take a single trick, if it is a grand slam, and two tricks, if it is a small slam. Against a mere game, you have to take more tricks to beat it, and so have to employ different tactics. When you hold the same honor combination at the top of two different suits—such as a K-Q-J sequence—ordinarily it is best to lead the longer of the two suits against a game and the shorter against a slam, as you are more likely to find the declarer holding losing cards in your shorter suit.

	♠ 6 2 ♥ A K 7 3 ♦ A 6 3 ♣ A 8 7 4
♠ 8 7 5 4 3 ♥ J 8 4 ♦ 10 5 2 ♣ 9 6	N W E S	♠ K Q J ♥ Q 10 ♦ K Q J 9 8 4 ♣ J 5
	♠ A 10 9 ♥ 9 6 5 2 ♦ 7 ♣ K Q 10 3 2

(Dealer. East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♦	Pass	Pass	Dbl
2 ♦	3 ♣	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	5 ♥	Pass	6 ♥

With slight variations, that bidding came at several tables of a duplicate Some of the declarers made the slam and others were set, the result depending entirely on what East led. Where a diamond was chosen, the contract was made; where a spade, it was nipped.

With the diamond lead, North won, ruffed the diamond 3 with the heart 2, led to the heart A and K, ruffed the diamond 6 with the heart 9, then began to run clubs. West ruffed the third one with the heart J, but his desperate spade shift fell to the A and the next two clubs brought a discard of North's second spade, so that he lost only that trump trick.

Nothing could be done to save the day for North when East led his spade K. The A was knocked out at once, so that, as soon as the heart J won a trick, the setting spade could be scored. North had no trouble ruffing out his diamonds, taking two hearts and then leading clubs; but it was impossible to discard the spade loser before West made his ruffing trick and then switched to the spade which settled the issue.

Tomorrow's Problem

	♠ A J 6 4 ♥ 3 ♦ K Q 10 2 ♣ A J 6 5
♠ K 10 8 5 3 ♥ 10 6 4 2 ♦ 7 5 4 ♣ 8	N W E S	♠ 9 2 ♥ Q 8 5 ♦ A J 9 3 ♣ Q 10 9 7
	♠ Q 7 ♥ A K J 9 7 ♦ 8 6 ♣ K 4 3 2

(Dealer: West. North - South vulnerable.)

After East leads the spade 9, the suit bid by his partner in response to a terrifically shaded double, how should North plan to play this deal to make an extra trick at 3-No Trumps?

GALION TO BUY 2 RAID SIRENS

Defense Council Acts After Fire Alarm Proves Failure In Test 'Alerts.'

GALION—When the Galion civilian defense council met Monday evening at the Municipal building, it was announced that a decision has been reached to purchase two additional sirens for use in air raid warnings. The announcement came as a result of surveys made recently following the trial air raid test several weeks ago at which time the fire siren was used without success.

Eric Brooks announced that investigation had been made for the purchase of the sirens and they will be placed on the water tower of the North Electric Manufacturing plant and on the city water tower. In the event of air raid drills, the fire siren, along with these two sirens, will be blown for a signal lasting two minutes. Citizens were asked to note that the fire siren is never blown that long a time.

Also at the meeting, reports were heard from W. L. Widrig, Chief of Police Merle C. Hess, reporting from the Galion Rifle club, announced that the club had received government queries in regard to classes in firearms instruction. Upon this matter the defense council appropriated $15 to assist in the organization of a class for men in rifle instruction. A course of five lessons of two hours each will be offered by the Rifle club in the near future.

The council also viewed the control center map now in the process of being drawn up by the city engineers. This map will mark out such areas which will be centers for civilian aids and utilities.

Senators Postpone Study of Manpower

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

You Can't Print That!

(A compendium of tales that can't be told with names, because they're too true to print. If you find in them any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead, you've probably guessed right!)

Peter B. is one of the town's leading wolves, which is saying something these day when the competition in the species is pretty brisk. Pete is a fine example of the authentic, upper case wolf. He is handsome in a tired sort of way (and well he might look tired!) he has a comfortable income, and he regards every girl—be she Tom's, Dick's or Harry's — as potential prey for Pete.

Kilgallen

Any pretty girl can get money or perhaps a present, from Pete, even without having a date with him, because, he reasons, and usually rightly, that when he gets around to the lass in question his good deed will bear fruit.

Did I say "any" pretty girl would be treated generously by our Peter? Correction, please. There's one girl—his very beautiful daughter, Peggy—who never gets anything from him but dirty looks and sour warnings to keep out of his life. It would cramp his style terribly to have around a daughter older than the cuties he's chasing. So Peggy works as a secretary and supports herself on $25 a week.

A month ago, Peter met the real girl of his dreams. She was perfect, except for the minor fact that she couldn't see him for dust. Well, he fell for her so hard that he proposed, instead of propositioned, and strangely enough, she accepted. "But," she said, "I will need at least $2,000 for my trousseau."

Peter gave it to her, gladly. And that boys and girls, was the last time he's seen her, or the two grand. You see, she'd heard about this daughter. She gave Peggy the whole $2,000, just like that, and now Peggy, though she still works, is a lot better dressed.

If her pop reads this, he'll know why.

But you can't print that. Peggy is too nice a girl to have it advertised that her dad is a heel.

For some seasons now the papers have been filled with stories about a mysterious heiress from the south, whom we shall call Charlotte. She bought night clubs just for a laugh, the columns said. She gave away money to all who needed it. She owned a fleet of fine cars. She lived in a beautiful suite in a sumptuous hotel. She was quite a girl.

Nobody knew where the moolah came from, but it was hinted that she was the scioness, if there is such a word, of one of the richest families below the Mason and Dixon lines, that she was connected with a business which brought in a fortune, etc., etc., etc.

Actually the more amusing truth was that she was the sweetheart of a wealthy middlewestern individual who moved in what might be called, euphemistically, "sporting circles." He made wads of money, and he gave Charlotte everything she asked for. Like all wise guys, he had a blind spot, and it was Charlotte. Frequently she wouldn't see him for months, but he sent the money just the same, getting a sort of vicarious kick out of reading stories about the flash she was making from coast to coast.

But in her travels, she encountered a vastly more glamorous — and even richer—sporting gentleman, who moved in the same circles as her friend out west. No. 2 sporting gentleman promptly annexed her for himself, and now he and Charlotte invade the best bistros nightly.

Out west, the other fellow is burning to a nice crisp and vowing all kinds of vengeance, and inasmuch as neither of the boys is the type to take those things lightly, any day may see fireworks of the X marks the spot variety.

And if that happened, wouldn't Charlotte be unhappy?

You just bet she wouldn't.

The idea of having two such big mob guys fighting over her would just fill her sweet southern blue eyes with wonderful glee.

But you can't print that. You all wouldn't want to unmask Charlotte's debutante pose, would you-all?"

OHIO TREASURY SURPLUS STILL BIGGEST ISSUE

Bricker Defends It, M'Sweeney Hits Neglect in Speeches on Wind-up Tour.

(By United Press)

Gov. John W. Bricker took his Republican campaign for re-election to Cleveland today while his Democratic opponent for the Ohio governorship, John McSweeney, visited Youngstown, Ashtabula, Painesville and other northeastern Ohio cities.

With one week left before election day, the main issue of their campaigns remain the same as it was six months ago—the $20,000,000 surplus in the state treasury.

Bricker took occasion to defend the state surplus in his radio address from Dayton Monday night. He said:

"No state in the union entered this war on a more solid financial foundation than Ohio. Ohio has no funded debt. Ohio is on a pay-as-you-go basis. Ohio has paid, or has the money to pay, the remainder of the inherited deficit of $40,000,000. Ohio has a cash surplus of more than $20,000,000. Ohio needs no new or increased taxes because of this surplus, notwithstanding rapidly declining state revenues."

McSweeney, speaking at Cleveland aud Mentor, said:

"Any man can have a bank account, under normal conditions, if he neglects his obligations and allows his family to starve. And any state can have a bank account, under normal conditions, if it neglects its obligations and allows the family of school districts and cities and towns to starve."

McSweeney told his audiences that "civilian defense in Ohio is starving." Bricker explained the state's defense set up and accused McSweeney of "maligning you (Ohio citizens) as much as this administration."

Bricker claimed editorial support for his administration in most of Ohio's large newspapers. McSweeney observed that "I need only say that he is supported in 1942 by the same newspapers which, in 1940, opposed Franklin D. Roosevelt."

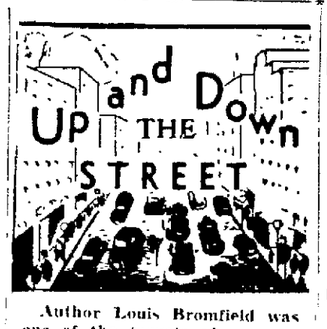
Up and Down THE STREET



Author Louis Bromfield was one of the targets of a gentle "rib" the other day in the Minneapolis Star-Journal. The paper reproduced on its editorial page an advertisement appearing in the current issue of "The Nation," announcing a dinner at Hotel Astor, New York, today, with a discussion on "The Century of the Common Man," and listing Bromfield as chairman, with Carl Sandburg, Jan Struther, Paul Robeson and Joseph Curran as speakers at $3.50 per plate. Quoth the Star-Journal "Wanna be a common man, buddy? We can getcha a ringside seat for three bucks and a half."

Shift of the Civic Music series from Senior high school auditorium to John Simpson caused considerable confusion last night, some laughable but some serious. On the serious side, transfer company men delivered the two harps used by the Salzedo ensemble to Senior high, and the harps were "missing" until discovered there at 8 p. m., 15 minutes before the concert was scheduled to open. Attorney Henry Huston and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Herbert, intent on arriving in time for good seats, arrived at Senior high and sat around for half an hour before they discovered their error. Dr. and Mrs. Gary C. Myers, Cleveland, were giving a P. T. A. lecture at Senior high last night.

CAMPAIGNING INTERFERES WITH ACTION

Committee Chairman Asserts 'Too Many Out of Town,' But Stiff Control Looms.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The congressional study of manpower problems today was postponed until after election day amid indications that even without further legislation the average citizen will experience greater government control of his life as the war continues.

The senate military affairs committee called off scheduled hearings for the rest of the week. Chairman Robert R. Reynolds, D., N. C., blamed a shortage of committee manpower — not enough members in town to make it worth while.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, and Col. Lewis Sanders, head of its reemployment division, testified yesterday about some of the changes which recruiting a 7,500,000-man army will bring about, while War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt told reporters the senate manpower bills were inadequate.

The draft officials differed with McNutt over the immediate need for compulsory "draft labor" legislation. McNutt had told the committee such legislation was "inevitable."

Sanders said existing authority was sufficient to handle about 90 per cent of the manpower problem, and that legislation to complete the job would not be necessary until next year. He said the only reason additional legislation was needed at all was the same reason police are needed—to enforce the program on the nonconformist minority.

McNutt told a press conference the administration has not decided whether to ask for national service legislation—the so-called "labor draft." But if it is enacted, he said, it should apply to women as well as men and should call for a single administrator.

Both Hershey and Sanders envisioned the day when every able-bodied man of military age—18 to 44 years inclusive—who now is deferred from service because he helps make the weapons of war, will be taken from his job by the army. Older men, women, and physically disabled will have to be trained to run the machines that turn out guns, tanks and planes.

CITY'S WATER EQUIPMENT O.K.

It's Adequate To Meet Any Emergency; None Available For Loan, However.

Mansfield's waterworks equipment is adequate to meet any emergency but there is no surplus which could be loaned to aonther municipality in case of breakdown or other cause for a water supply loss, O. C. Kalbfleisch, waterworks superintendent, said today.

Kalbfleisch's remarks were occasioned by the ruling of Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert that the state council of defense could, in cases of "real emergency," requisition such material to be sent where direly needed.

Herbert's ruling was made to meet the possible situation of delays caused by priorities relating to such materials, coupled with the normal requirement of advertising for bids for such purchases which together might prove disastrous to a community's war efforts.

Recently the attorney general ruled that requisitioning of fire-fighting equipment owned by townships and municipalities is within the power of the state defense council.

When a neighboring city a few months ago was unable to supply railroad shops with water Kalbfleisch announced that Mansfield's water-pumping capacity could easily afford an adequate surplus over an indefinite period of time.

Present pumping facilities, he said, exceed normal demands. In addition, the idle Hedges pumping station could be put into operation to meet any excessive increase in demand.

SHARE-RIDE LIABILITY CASE HEADS FOR NEW COURT TEST

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — A "test case" decision that share-the-ride drivers are not liable for injury to passengers headed today toward the court of appeals.

Two war workers, asserting the rights of all passengers were "adversely defined," filed an appeal within an hour after the decision was handed down by Chief Justice Homer G. Powell of the Cuyahoga county common pleas court.

The ruling was given in a suit brought by Joseph C. Miller, an oil company employe, who asked the court for a declaratory judgment concerning his relationship to two men who shared his car. Judge Powell ruled the driver could not be held liable in event of an accident unless "wanton and willful negligence" was proved, adding the driver was a host and the passengers were guests within the meaning of the Ohio "guest statute."

Attorneys said the decision set a legal precedent for the federal government and gave wide protection to drivers forced to share their cars under the government's tire rationing program.

M. L. Bernsteen, appointed by the Cleveland Bar association to represent Miller's two passengers, contended the ruling was erroneous, asserting it did not take into consideration the two workers' payment for gasoline and oil in sharing the ride.

"These passengers were not guests," Bernsteen claimed. "They were commercial passengers paying a fee for their ride."

He added that the case would be carried to the Ohio supreme court if necessary to get the question fully answered.

CHECK 'MYSTERY'

Police Probe Case of Man In Coma at Hospital.

Mystery surrounds the cause of injury to Joe Papay, 336 East Second street, who is in a coma at General hospital with a broken rib and punctured lung.

Papay's auto, with a badly damaged front end, was found by relatives yesterday near a Newman street garage between Fifth and Orange streets, according to a police report by Patrolman Roelif Hout. The injured man was taken to the hospital Sunday night by a man giving his name as Sam Hall, taxicab driver, but a check of cab companies by Hout failed to reveal a driver of that name.

Papay was sent to the hospital after being taken to the office of Dr. W. A. Smith, North Mulberry street, by the man giving his name as Hall.

Police investigation was started on reports by Frank Sellek, 324 Lexington avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Varga, 222 Orange street.

WASHINGTON (INS) - President William Green of the American Federation of Labor today urged that employers of "frozen" labor not be allowed to gain profits.

"If the worker is frozen in his job, denied the right to improve his standard of life and living by securing work at higher wages when opportunity presents itself, management and the owners of industry should forego the right to profit from the earnings of such worker."

Fathers Leaving Jail, Sons Still Out Of School

WOOSTER — (AP) — Three Wayne county Amish fathers who chose to serve county jail sentences rather than send their children to high school, as required by state law, will complete 30-day terms tomorrow.

But the county school authorities still have the problem to solve.

W. E. Kreiling, county school attendance officer, said about 30 pupils were out of school illegally this fall. Less than a dozen, he said, entered classes after nine fathers—all members of the Amish and Mennonite sects—were named in formal charges.

Some school-age children have been sent to live with relatives in other counties where authorities are less strict in enforcing the statutes, Kreiling said.

"In such instances, the county in which the children have taken up residence is responsible for enforcement of the law," O. E. Hill, assistant state superintendent of schools, said at Columbus.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

(One of a series by Hollywood Columnist Robbin Coons, who is on a cross-country tour.)

OHIO FARM, U. S. A — My friends in Washington told me the trouble. "The trouble," they said, "is that back there, away from the coasts, they don't know there's a war."

This is part of "back there." This is peace and quiet, a lovely pastoral scene designed in autumn's technicolor. The seasons don't know there's a war. A few weeks ago it was deep summer, hot and blue, the shade dark under the lushly green foliage of thickets — locust, elm, maple, oak.

Coons

Now the meadows are brushed with russet and gold and scarlet. The woods are a pageant of copper and flame, marching the rolling countryside, climbing the hills, the professional incense of woodsmoke and blue haze hovering over these rites of Indian summer. Sunshine is thin and golden over the cornshocks, the haymows, the pumpkins, the somnolent cattle.

Hitler can't change this. It's the same slow, peaceful cycle these farms have always known, and these forests before there were farms.

Only down on the road, in the old farmhouse, there's a light burning till 3 in the morning. The farm wife is canning—no time for it in the day because she had to help her husband with the chickens and the haying. No farmhand there. . . .

Across the way there's a bright spry farming lad of 70. That morning, after he tended the stock and shocked his last corn, he went out and chopped up an old fallen fruit tree, hauled in the firewood, and took time out to hear the latest bulletin on Stalingrad. "Them Russians!" he said, with boundless admiration, slapping the seat of his faded overalls. "Them Russians—how you s'pose they do it?"

They don't know there's a war, either, in the other houses—especially the houses with the little flags at the windows. One star, two stars. Gold star. They don't know it at the place where the only son got a 60-day draft deferment to help with the harvest, and the farmer father is ill, and no farmhands likely to show up. They don't know it in the town, where the news from Bataan, the Solomons, North Ireland, Egypt and Alaska had and has a special personal meaning to so many.

They talk of this friend and that—the boy lost on Corregidor; the girl down at the Red Cross whose husband, at last word, was "missing in action" in the Philippines; the fortyish husband who's due to "go in" soon.

The trouble, as my friends in Washington said, is that back here they don't know there's a war.

Morton Cooper Named Most Valuable In National Loop

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Mansfield high school's Tygers will have a new star in their lineup next Friday night when they tangle with Portsmouth's Trojans in their homecoming grid battle at Stadium field.

No, Coach Paul Snyder hasn't considered any lineup changes, but this new star will be in the Tyger fold nevertheless, kicking, running, passing, blocking and tackling with all the polish and eclat gained from years and years of experience.

For this new star is not only a veteran, he's an old man. And he doesn't have to worry about eligibility, or training, or practice, or keeping in condition, or not having dates, or early to bed and early to rise and all that stuff.

Old Man Jinx they're still calling him in these days.

Portsmouth has become convinced that Old Man Jinx is the best player in the opposing lineup every time the Trojans get away from home.

They haven't won a game on the road this season, although they had high hopes of winning at Springfield and at Middletown. But Springfield swamped them, 27-6, and last week Middletown bumped them 12-0

So give a cheer for Old Man Jinx,
Who put those Trojans on the blinx;
Although all of Portsmouth thinx,
Confidentially, he stinx.

* * *

The headline in the Portsmouth Times said:

"Portsmouth 11 Fades As It Gets Away - From - Home Jitters."

And the story of the game started out:

Middletown, Oct. 24—"They just can't play away from home."

That was the closest explanation the coaching staff of the Portsmouth high school Trojans could give here last night after seeing a potentially powerful football eleven fade before a third-period assault as the Middletown Middies romped to their fifth victory of the year, 12-0.

Now, when the paper gets to printing it, and the coaches get to saying it, you can't blame the kids much if they begin to believe in this jinx business.

And this is a very sad state of mind for a bunch of kids to be in when they believe 'No matter what we do, and no matter how we play we just can't win That jinx has us'

Even if they play hard and even fight hard that kind of thinking is bound to take away that extra bit of zip needed to win. Nobody ever won with a defeatist attitude.

Portsmouth has a really good team, and early in the season was boasting if owned the best line seen in that area in years. They've still got that line, and aren't to be rated off the difference in scores against Springfield posted by the Trojans and the Tygers.

Ohio Again Rated No. 1

More Experts Swing Over On Buckeye Side.

NEW YORK (AP) Ohio State's unbeaten football team, which appears stronger each time it takes the field, also is gaining favor with the gridiron experts, who for the third straight week named the Buckeyes the nation's No 1 college eleven in the weekly Associated Press poll

In the Oct 13 poll, first of the 1942 season, Ohio State rated 25 first-place votes and a total of 636 points Last week the Bucks landed in first place on 58 ballots and collected 1,030 points

But today, 80 of the 123 sports writers participating in the poll reserved first place for the Big Ten conference pace-setters who knocked off Northwestern 20-6 last Saturday, their fifth triumph in a row.

With additional backing on the other ballots, the Buckeyes amassed a total of 1,150 points, figured on the basis of ten for each first-place vote, nine for second, and so on. No voter rated Ohio State lower than sixth

Georgia remained in second place and Alabama retained its hold on third place but fourth was taken over by Notre Dame, which moved up from eighth place after jumping from the 22nd spot two weeks ago.

Michigan slipped from fourth to 13th and Illinois turned fifth place over to Georgia Tech, dropping to 11th Army and Texas Christian are newcomers to the top ten this week.

Wildcats And Dover Head Card

Newark Battles For C-O League Crown.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The Wildcats of Newark and the Tornadoes of Dover get the "game of the week" billing in Ohio's high school football circles, the pair of six-game winners being scheduled to tangle Thursday night at Newark in a contest which should decide the Central Ohio league championship.

* * *

Newark came up to the big fray with a 26-12 win over Zanesville, Halfback Jack Bickel counting two touchdowns to run his scoring total to 103, while Dover enjoyed a 34 to 0 romp over Marietta. Two weeks ago Newark ended Marietta's four-game victory streak, 26 to 6.

Both teams are as well-rounded as a country haircut, and the outcome is regarded as a tossup.

The week-end set of contests involving the 500-odd Buckeye teams was replete with unusual happenings. Lima South bowed 40 to 7 to Dayton Roosevelt without incurring a penalty as the winners racked up their sixth straight win. Lima Central beat Findlay, 13 to 7, for the first time since 1928; the Toledo Devilbiss band upsed up too much time at the half and cost its team a 15-yard penalty which helped Toledo Waite win by 14 to 7, Marion Harding's 15-game winning streak was ended, 20 to 0, by a thrice-defeated Sandusky Blue Streak club, while Springfield's Wildcats upset by Mansfield 6 to 0 a week ago, turned Giant killer to wreck Hamilton's Big Blue four-time winner and heavy favorite, by 32 to 13.

Fullback Bob Lucas of Paulding registered the week's outstanding individual performance The Negro junior his team 7-0 behind Lima Shawnee's unbeaten crew at the half, scored 34 points in the final two periods to win by 34 to 14 That boosted his season's record to 173 points - the state's best - scored in the five games since his club was shut out in the opener by Defiance Last week he scored 37 of his team's 38

Jimmy Schenk of Lima St Rose also put on a one-man show, scoring 26 points as his team beat Pandora 27 to 26

* * *

Massillon's mighty Tigers rolled over Mansfield's Tygers 32 to 0 for their 49th without a defeat, and appear set to battle it out with Canton McKinley, tied once in six starts, for a hefty slice of the championship laurels in the season's finale.

Game Boasts Two Star Backfields

COLUMBUS - (AP) - Stack a couple of double-star backfield combinations behind two fast-charging, evenly matched lines and anything can happen—and it probably will Saturday in the Ohio State-Wisconsin football clash

The undefeated records of both teams give the game top-ranking in the national picture, but it's more of a "natural" than that. Ohio has the western conference's two top scorers, fullback Gene Fekete and halfback Paul Sarringhaus, while the Badgers have fullback Pat Harder last year's leading conference ground-gainer, and Elroy 'Ghost' Hirsch, a sophomore halfback sensation

While those four men have been handling the ball-carrying chores in highly acceptable fashion, much of their success —Ohio's five straight wins and Wisconsin's five wins and a tie —has been due to the stellar line play of both teams.

HOMECOMING GAME TICKETS ON SALE

Tickets for Mansfield high school's homecoming football game Friday night at Stadium field with the Portsmouth High's Trojans, were placed on sale in the usual downtown places last night, and Ticket Director George Sherman announced there are plenty of seats available on the east side of the field "even on the 50-yard line."

Tickets are being sold at Tawse Pharmacy, Brown's Drug store, Mayor Drug store, Yuncker Sports, and Mansfield Athletic Supply.

PIGSKIN POST-MORTEM

PACIFIC COAST—Undefeated Santa Clara is knocked from that class by the University of California of Los Angeles Bruins, 14-6, in the coast's biggest upset. Bob Waterfield of U. C. L. A. carries ball here.

MIDWEST—Ohio State's undefeated Buckeyes roll over Northwestern, 20-6, at Evanston, Ill., with Paul Sarringhaus, seen lugging the ball, one of the Bucks' individual stars.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK (AP)—So Bob Pastor is retiring eh? . . . That keeps his record clear—always after Joe Louis and never catching up . . . Only the other day Jimmy Johnston was claiming the heavyweight title for Bob when Louis was the guy who was returning . . . Wonder if Jimmy could just be trying to get his fighter's name in the papers without having it pointed out that Pastor recently lost a fight to Jimmy Bivins?

COMMON AILMENT.

At a recent soccer match between Bath City and Swansea town in England a squad of police was on hand with a bucket of disinfectant . . . Every time the ball went out of bounds, the ball and the shoes of the men who retrieved it were washed in the hand to prevent the spread of foot and mouth disease

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

John Mooney, Salt Lake Telegram: "Understand Manager J. Johnston is thinking of making scouting trip through the Hinterlands, possibly looking for a new champion. Well, after Bicycle Bob was beaten by Jimmy Bivins, who can blame old Three J's for looking for fresher pastors?"

SERVICE DEPT.

Cardinal Pitching Ace Honored By Writers

Has Big Margin Over Teammate, Enos Slaughter, In Voting

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)—The National league's most valuable player in 1942 was Morton Cecil Cooper, the big right-handed pitching ace of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, a committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America announced today.

The 28-year-old Missourian, who won 22 games to lead the Redbirds into the world series, received 13 of the committee's 24 first place votes and 263 out of a possible 336 points in the balloting as well as being the only player whose name appeared on every ballot.

This gave him a big margin over his teammate, Enos (Country) Slaughter, the Cards' slugging rightfielder, who edged out Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants for second honors, 200 points to 190 and six first place votes to four.

The only other player to gain even one first place nod was Martin (Slats) Marion, the elongated shortstop of the Cardinals, who rated enough recognition to finish seventh in the selections.

Cooper was beaten only seven times and his 22 victories were more than any other pitcher in either major league produced. He pitched a complete game in every contest that he won and led the majors in shutouts with ten, the most a National league hurler has achieved since 1933.

He always was given the toughest, most important pitching assignments by Manager Billy Southworth and his success sparked the rest of the team in the bitter battle with the Brooklyn Dodgers for the National league championship. The rating was determined solely on the basis of the regular season.

The honor signalized a remarkable recovery by Cooper from an elbow operation in the middle of the 1941 season. Last year he won 13 games and lost nine, even though out of action during sizable portion of the campaign

Slaughter was ranked somewhere in the first ten selections by 21 of the committeemen and Ott by 22, but below them the writers showed a wide divergence of opinion.

Mickey Owen, the scrappy catcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, came in fourth with 102 points. Johnny Mize of the New York Giants was ranked fifth with 97 points and Pete Reiser of the Dodgers sixth with 91 points.

Then came Marion with 81 points. Dolph Camilli of Brooklyn with 42, Bob Elliott of Pittsburgh with 39 and Claude Passeau of the Chicago Cubs ranked tenth with 33

The American league's most valuable player will be announced in morning papers of Wednesday, Nov. 4.

START VICTORY TAX DEDUCTION FIRST OF YEAR

Employers Ordered To Take Five Per Cent From Pay Checks Over $12.

By JAMES MARLOW AND GEORGE ZIELKE

WASHINGTON — Beginning Jan. 1, your employer will start deducting the new "victory" tax from your paycheck.

This is in addition to your regular income tax.

The victory tax is 5 per cent of your income over $12 a week ($624 a year). If you're on a wage or salary, your employer will withhold this percentage and pay it directly to the government, just as he does now with your social security deduction, which will continue unchanged.

If, however, you're in business for yourself, or you're a domestic servant or farm worker, or a public official paid by fees, you'll pay this tax along with your regular tax on 1943 income March 15, 1944.

In either case, you'll find a place on your blank at that time for computing your exact victory tax. The business man will find he can deduct the same expenses as under the regular income tax. An individual will find he can deduct such things as alimony or separate maintenance payments, any gain from a sale of a capital asset or any compensation for injury or sickness. Charity contributions are excluded.

But then he'll come to the matter of:

Credits. The treasury is just "borrowing" part of the money involved in the victory tax. A single person will be able to claim a credit of 25 per cent (up to a limit of $500) and a married man 40 per cent (up to a limit of $1,000)—plus 2 per cent for each dependent (limit $100 each)—of the tax.

These credits fall into two classes:

1. Current credit. You'll be able to deduct the credit from the amount you pay in 1944 on your regular 1943 income tax if (note this "if") you have paid out an equivalent amount in 1943 for the life insurance premiums (provided the insurance was in force on Sept 1, 1942), for payments which reduce your outstanding debts below the lowest amount owed in the period from Sept. 1, 1942, to the end of the year; or for purchases of war bonds and stamps

If your payments for such items do not equal the total credit allowance, the rest becomes·

2. Post-war credit. For this remaining amount of the credit you'll get a government bond or certificate which will bear no interest and which you can't transfer or cash until after the war.

Better sharpen your pencil right now and see whether you won't find it profitable—besides being a good and patriotic investment—to buy some more war bonds next year.

Other ways your pocketbook will be hit:

After you've figured out your regular income tax which will be due next year, plus your victory tax, better be cautious about planning how to spend the rest of your money.

The treasury is cooking up another taxation measure to go before congress early next year, and most observers predict it'll be a retail sales tax. It might be worked out as a savings plan whereby you'll get stamps—convertible into bonds—in exchange for the money you'd pay.

Some other kind of compulsory saving may be considered, perhaps pay roll deductions for stamps or bonds.

Furthermore, the so-called "painless" taxes have been increased—there are higher levies on liquor, Beer, wines, cigarets, cigars, transportation fares, telephone and telegraph service and lubricating oil.

So don't be surprised if you're left with a lot less money than in the past to spend for luxuries.

STORE TABLES

Park Employes Close Summer Recreation Centers.

City park employes under direction of Frank Button, superintendent, this week are placing in winter storage all movable tables, benches, tennis court equipment and other furniture.

Due to fair, warm weather prevailing after the usual park closing date of Labor day picnic facilities were continued available for group meetings until now. Due in some measure to tire rationing and gasoline conservation city parks enjoyed during the last summer their greatest patronage in history.

Burton today rather laughingly gave voice to a dilemma — many iron horseshoe court standards and a number of metal refuse containers are missing since the recent scrap drive and with the advent of the Halloween season.

Water taps are being shut off this week, with all lines drained to guard against breakage during winter freezes

HOW 10,000 TANK CARS WERE PULLED OUT OF THE AIR

This is a story of headlines.

The first headline reads, "Navy Announces Two Tankers Sunk in Atlantic".

The second headline says much the same—"Tankers Torpedoed—Fuel Runs Low in Massachusetts"

Hot water becomes a luxury in New York. Homes can't be kept quite warm enough. Cars without gasoline stand idle in Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Virginia, and Maine.

What to do?

America turns to her railroads. Can they carry a greater share of the load?

They can and they do.

Starting with normal shipments of 12,000 bbls. of oil a day, the Erie together with other railroads double this figure. Then we double it again and again and again until we are carrying 850,000 bbls. a day. Seventy times as much today as in 1941!

Phenomenal? Yes, but no trick of magic. It takes years of "know-how", the pooling of facilities, and the interchange of new operating ideas to make one train do the work of many—to pull 10,000 tank cars out of the air.

The wholehearted support of government agencies helped. So did the cooperation of civilian shippers and car owners. But the most important factor was an intangible—a will to serve the American people that is present all the time, in peace as well as in war.

In spite of every submarine in the Nazi navy, fuel oil and gasoline are going through.

And the last headline reads, "Threat to Comfort and Health of America's Homes Banished"

23,578 TRAINS PER DAY
1,408,964 CARS PER DAY

On Page 1 of the paper each day you will find a list of the advertisements to be checked that day.

All you have to do is to decide each day which Large Ad, which Medium Ad and which Small Ad you think will do the advertiser the most good. Just write three names on this blank each day.

$750.00 in awards go to those readers whose selections are nearest to what the majority of readers think. Every week is a separate survey with a dozen or more cash awards each week.

Every member of any family may send in one answer each week and there are many awards each week, but only one award for a good answer will go to any one family in any one week.

I THINK THESE ADS WILL DO THE ADVERTISERS THE MOST GOOD.

You are NOT required to write a letter to receive an award.

The awards are decided on the selections above. We would really appreciate it, though, if you would write a note saying what you DO NOT LIKE and . . . also . . . WHY YOU LIKED some of the good ads

We, sincerely want your suggestions and ideas of how we may improve our advertising service for your benefit. Write your letter in your own way! It's the thoughts and suggestions that matter. You are not being "judged" by your letters. Actually they have nothing to do with the awards . . . but . . . they will be helpful by giving additional information to our merchants.

Your criticisms and suggestions will be given to the merchants to help them to improve their advertisements BUT the merchants will NOT be given the names of those who write the letters. This is so you may say just what you really think without embarrassment.

STOCK MARKET DECLINES ON EARLY TRADES

Armour & Co. Swings Large Revolving Credit With Group of Banks.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks shifted to slightly lower ground in today's early market dealings but utilities and a few specialties were resistant.

Fractionally off at a moderately active opening were U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric, Chrysler, Westinghouse and Goodyear. Minor gains were posted by Electric Power and Light and Anaconda Copper.

Financial circles saw a likelihood of many more financial transactions by leading corporations in line with the overnight announcement that Armour & Co. of Illinois had concluded negotiations for a $50,000,000 revolving credit with a group of banks.

General Motors tops such corporate credits so far with its billion dollar deal.

Enlarged working capital needs in connection with war orders explain these bank borrowings.

WIDEN GRIP ON AXIS POSITIONS

bombers and fighters, roared over the desert battle ground, attacking enemy targets in the battle area and Axis landing grounds behind the lines, the communique said.

Fourteen of the Axis planes destroyed over the desert were shot down by Allied fighters. Ten Allied planes were reported missing from these operations and the defense of Malta.

(The Rome radio reported today that the desert battle "increased in violence yesterday after having continued throughout the previous night." The Rome report said that "although the battle is not yet over we are in a position to state that the Italo-German forces stood up to the powerful attacks unleashed by the enemy and repulsed them at all points.")

The British ground forces necessarily were moving cautiously through the sea of intricately placed mine fields which formed the major obstacle in the defense set up by Field Marshal Rommel.

Germans Lose Grip On Stalingrad Sector

MOSCOW — (AP) — The Germans lost a foothold in the southern industrial section of Stalingrad and fell back to the barren steppes outside the city today under Red army counterattacks while Nazi assaults were reported to have beaten futilely upon restored defenses of a northside factory.

Russian pressure against the German flanks both south and northwest of Stalingrad appeared to be growing and the invaders struggled ineffectually within the city, the Russians said.

Izvestia said the Germans had been thrown back behind the low rolling hills which rim the southern edge of Stalingrad, placing their front 150 yards from the city boundary, and chimneys of the battle-scarred Soviet factories in that area continued to smoke.

One Red army division was credited with killing 4,000 Germans and Rumanians in six days.

Pravda said that, because of heavy losses, the Germans were unable any longer to press attacks on all sectors.

WASP FLIERS IN REVENGE FIGHT

island and it included battleships, cruisers and destroyers," Sherman said. At the same time, a quota of badly needed reinforcements of troops and planes was being moved onto Guadalcanal.

"The Wasp was the flagship of a task force engaged in covering the movements of reinforcements into the island. On Sept. 14, the operations of our task force had caused the enemy to withdraw temporarily, at least, but the necessity still existed to support the reinforcing movement.

"On Sept. 15, there had been no reported contact by the task force, except that the Wasp's fighters had downed one four-engined Japanese bomber shortly after noon.

"While changing course, about 2:14 p. m., torpedo wakes were sighted close to the ship and three torpedoes struck forward, in the vicinity of the magazines and gasoline tanks at a time when the fuel system was actively in use for fueling planes and other planes were being armed with bombs.

"The shock of the torpedoes was very great. The flash of one torpedo extended over 100 feet in the air as seen from other ships.

"Almost immediately, fires broke out on deck and in the hangars.

"A great many heavy internal explosions followed, including bombs, gasoline tanks and ready ammunition. Oil and gasoline on the water caught fire.

"I had backed the ship around after it was hit in order to bring her stern into the wind and give the crew the best chance to fight the fire and also get clear of burning oil on the water.

"About 20 minutes after we were hit, a particularly heavy and violent explosion occurred in the area below the bridge. I believe it included two heavy bombs and other ammunition.

"We had hopes of saving the Wasp, but the explosions were continuing and the fire was spreading aft while the ship was listing down by the head. A great many casualties were being incurred by the crew fighting the fire, although we tried to minimize the danger.

"It was apparent that unless we got the men off the ship we were going to lose many more. The Wasp was settling in the water and the fire was spreading.

"So, after conferring with the task force commander and receiving reports from below, I gave orders to abandon ship an hour and 20 minutes after she had been hit.

"I personally left the ship after seeing my task force commander overside and taking a last look around, after which I went down a line.

"After dark, the Wasp was burning brightly from stem to stern.

"She was sunk by one of our own destroyers.

"The sinking of the Wasp had been reported so many times by the enemy we had thought over carefully what we would do if it ever did happen."

"There were many heroic acts on deck and in the water. A special tribute is due Lieut. Comdr. Laurize H. Talum of the dental corps, USNR, who lost his life while ministering to the wounded.

"There was Comdr. Michael H. Kernodle who gave lifebelts to others who couldn't swim. Kernodle and others also got lines and made them fast to a half dozen men.

"One reason only a few men were lost was because they got together in groups in the water."

Elevator Operator Loses Skin But Not Life in Accident.

NEWARK, N. J.—(INS)—Irving C. Steinbrick, 17-year-old elevator operator, had his life saved a half inch at a time—thanks to a hard-working squad of cops and fifteen gallons of heavy lubricating oil.

When Steinbrick became wedged between the floor of his lift and the elevator shaft, every device to extricate him failed until the police tore off his clothes, doused him with oil and pulled him out a half inch at a time. While the cops above pulled, the policemen below pushed. They saved his life but not his hide, for with every inch of progress he lost an inch of skin.

After an hour and a half, Steinbrick was hauled out of the trap, yelling with pain but not seriously injured.

Outcome of Solomons Fight Doubtful, Knox

American defenders of Guadalcanal by land, sea and air.

Generally, Knox said, the Pacific situation "is about the same as before, a darn tough, stiff fight."

Noting that today is Navy day—the date for paying honor to men of the fleet—Knox said "in some respects it is the most notable Navy day, because the navy in all its history never put up a gamer fight than it is putting up now."

Capt. Forrest P. Sherman, commander of the Wasp, disclosed at Pearl Harbor last night the carrier was making a turn when hit and if the torpedoes had been fired a few minutes later they would have missed.

The battle now in progress already has resulted in severe damage to another of the United States' four known remaining carriers, the sinking of the destroyer Porter, and lesser damage to other ships.

But the fighting, which assumed major proportions Sunday after a series of tank, artillery and aerial attacks on Guadalcanal, has not all been one-sided.

The Japanese have suffered damage to two carriers, two heavy cruisers and one light cruiser since Sunday. Twenty-two of their planes have been knocked out of the skies, including 17 fighters and five bombers.

The Americans seemed to have the edge in the air but the matter of naval supremacy appeared yet to be decided.

A force of enemy cruisers and destroyers was able to stand off and shell American positions on Guadalcanal from the north Sunday while enemy land troops were charging against our southern flank.

Five heavy tank and artillery assaults were made on the west flank Friday and Saturday but the enemy apparently found the going too tough there.

To add to Sunday's day-long inferno, enemy dive bombers screamed down on the American-held airfield, inflicting minor damage. Five of the bombers were shot out of a flight of about 16 and Grumman "Wildcats" were reported to have accounted for the 17 fighters.

Although battered from land, sea and air, the American soldiers and marines on the ground "held their positions," the navy announced.

It was while protecting the movement of supplies and reinforcements to these men, who have fought off wave after wave of fresh enemy troops, that the Wasp was lost.

She was mortally wounded by a prowling submarine that fired a salvo of three torpedoes into the vicinity of her powder magazines the afternoon of Sept. 15. A series of heavy explosions tore through the ship, starting fires that raged out of control.

All hope of saving her gone, a U. S. destroyer administered the coup de grace with torpedoes and she went down to join two other American carriers, the Lexington and the Yorktown, on the bottom of the Pacific. She was the 13th ship reported lost in the Solomons.

The navy said all but about 10 per cent of the personnel, normally 1,800 officers and men, were rescued.

The 739-foot Wasp was completed only two years ago but already she had been in service in both hemispheres, having been used early this year to ferry planes to the Mediterranean island of Malta. Her usual fighting force consisted of between 72 and 80 planes.

But other carriers remained to fight on. Only yesterday, the navy reported, a carrier task force exchanged air attacks with strong enemy forces northeast of Guadalcanal and it was in this engagement that the destroyer Porter was sunk and one of our carriers damaged.

Twice during Sunday's heavy land fighting flights of Douglas "Dauntless" dive bombers roared away from the Guadalcanal airfield and bombed a force of enemy cruisers and destroyers north of nearby Florida island.

One enemy heavy cruiser took a direct hit and was stopped during the first attack and another heavy cruiser was reported hit during the second. A few minutes later a group of army "flying fortresses" struck at this same force and scored two bomb hits on a light cruiser, which was left burning and "dead" in the water.

While the main action centered in the Solomon islands theater, General MacArthur's Australian headquarters reported Allied warplanes were continuing their widespread raids on enemy bases in New Guinea and Dutch Timor.

In return, enemy planes raided Darwin, Australia, causing minor damage and dropped bombs harmlessly on Port Moresby and Milne bay.

Grew Warns U. S. Against Optimism

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The American people, shocked into action by Pearl Harbor, must not relax again or they will run the risk of renewed tragedy and unnecessary despair, Joseph C. Grew, former U. S. ambassador to Tokyo, said today.

"A foolish optimism, a complacent self-confidence can prepare the way for an unnecessary despair," he told a luncheon attended by authors and bookmen.

"In the serious maturity of our national life, we can and will triumph. The enemies we face are no more powerful than we are. But we cannot fight partially, or tentatively, or dubiously, against men who are fighting body and soul under the frenzy of fanaticism exploited by dictatorship."

Declares Navy Was Ready For Losses

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—The navy had expected such serious losses as those latest reported from the Pacific and was prepared to take them, Vice Admiral Richard S. Edwards, second in command of the U. S. fleet, said today.

"No one knows at this date if the Solomons will hold," Edwards said at a press conference. "Our navy is now strongly outnumbered in that area. People must realize that the Japanese navy is the second largest in the world."

He said several submarines participated in the attack upon the aircraft carrier Wasp, "and we believe we got several of them."

Edwards said that our battleships had played little part in the fighting because the war is "still in a defensive phase."

"Our battleships are big, slow-moving vessels. It's more of a cruiser's war at present," he said.

OPEN HEARING IN HAUPT CASE

Jurors Hear Testimony on Alleged Helping of Saboteur.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—A jury of nine housewives and three men heard opening statements and testimony today in the treason trial of six German-born defendants charged with aiding Herbert Hans Haupt, who was executed with five other Nazi saboteurs Aug. 8.

The jury, including Johnny Paycheck, former heavyweight boxer, was locked up last night at the request of defense attorneys who told Judge William J. Campbell that there was "great public prejudice" against the defendants — Haupt's parents, Hans Max and Erne Haupt; his uncle and aunt, Walter and Lucille Froehling, and two friends, Otto and Kate Wergin.

ANNOUNCES DIVIDEND

MIDDLETOWN—(INS)—A dividend of 20 cents, covering the final quarter of 1942, and a year-end dividend of 10 cents, both on common stock, were authorized today by the American Rolling Mill company, President Charles R. Hook announced.

MANSFIELDERS MEET COFFEE CURB WILLINGLY

on the ration list because of excessive buying.

There is nothing to prevent housewives from buying chicory and mixing it with coffee to stretch out the supply, rationing officials said.

How coffee rationing is expected to affect some Mansfielders is contained in the statement below:

Harvey W. Burghard, grocer: "People haven't bought coffee normally for three months. Whereas we used to have a stock of about two tons, today we have none. Mansfield would have had a coffee famine long ago if Bissmans hadn't kept them supplied." .. ..

Mrs. Ford Banks, department store clerk: "We will be satisfied; a good breakfast cup is enough."

Mrs. J. E. Augustine, 292 Sheridan avenue: "We use more coffee than that but if they just give our boy in the navy enough milk to drink we should worry about our coffee."

Mrs. Fred Marlow, 132 Benton street: "I get a pound and a half every two weeks but we can get along on less and will be glad to do it if it furthers the war effort."

E. M. Roth, restaurant proprietor: "We haven't been told yet just how our business will be affected. We get along all right with sugar rationing so we probably will with coffee rationing, too. The disagreeable part is that such a thing is necessary largely because of hoarders."

Mrs. Nona Darling, Lucas R.D. 1, General hospital receptionist: "You can get along on anything if you have to. I life coffee but I could get along without it. At home we average a pound a week, se we'll have to cut down."

Howard Ramsey, 180½ Park avenue west, state highway patrolman: "Coffee rationing won't affect me very much because the only time I drink coffee is in the morning."

Mrs. Emma Witzky, 85 Ashland road, a waitress: "I like coffee very much—a lot of people use it as a pastime but with me it's a stimulant and I'll miss my usual amount. But any good American is willing to do without some things."

Mrs. Velda German, Lexington, stenographer: "I have two lunches to pack each day for defense workers. Although I don't know exactly how much it takes, I imagine we'll have to skimp a little—but anything for victory!"

Chester Burkhart, 947 Maumee avenue, postman: "It looks as though I won't be able to get enough coffee to drink to satisfy me—I'm used to a cup with every meal."

Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner — "From a health standpoint coffee rationing likely will not impair health but from a personal standpoint, well, I like a second cup at breakfast at least."

Robert Black, city clerk—"Personally, I'll probably suffer for a while but probably the rationing will automatically reduce my coffee consumption. No doubt most of us can easily get along on less but for outdoor workers it seems a more liberal regulation could be arranged."

Mrs. Freida Gorby, deputy court clerk—"If self-denial of a second cup will in anywise benefit the men of our armed forces, I'm for it. We should accustom ourselves to a little when we know there are many in the world who must get along with none."

Mrs. Floyd Buzzard, housewife, Mansfield, R. D. 3: "It will cut our family short since there are three of us to drink coffee and we generally use one pound a week. If you have to put coffee in a thermos bottle for a lunch every day it takes more."

Mrs. Grace Myers, housewife, 425 West Fifth street: "I feel I've got myself pretty well rationed right now. I've cut myself down to one cup in the morning. I never feel I want more than what the other fellow is entitled to."

W. T. Houston, assistant postmaster: "I think we're going to have enough coffee since I drink just one cup in the morning and generally have tea in the evening."

Mrs. A. W. Meihack, housewife, 1001 Park avenue west: "Under the new rationing program our family would be entitled to more than we generally use if we wanted to take advantage of obtaining the full amount. We don't use more than a pound every two weeks the way it is."

Mrs. F. B. Fairman, housewife, 342 Glessner avenue: "I feel that if the boys have to make sacrifices we can, too. I usually use one and a-half to two pounds of coffe a week but now I'll just have to stretch it farther.

Declares Government Hides War Reverses

BEDFORD, Ind.—(INS)—Condemning the government's operation of censorship and asserting that "the true story of Pearl Harbor has not yet been told," U. S. Sen. Raymond E. Willis called for the administration to replace distrust with frankness as an aid to winning the war.

Addressing a Republican rally at Bedford, Ind., Senator Willis asserted that "Jimmy Doolittle's raid on Tokyo in April was at the expense of all but one of the planes involved."

The senator added that "of 40 ships in a July convoy to Russia, only 10 of them reached port and even some of those were damaged."

Declaring that people feel they have not been given the facts about the war, Willis demanded that censorship be restricted only to those happenings necessary for success of the war program. The government's policy has created distrust, he continued, and the public is beginning to fear that even greater losses have been kept secret.

The speaker did not elaborate on his statements nor disclose the source of his information.

Willkie Reports To Nation

Making a radio report to the nation on his recent 31,000-mile globe-girdling air trip, Wendell Willkie (above), calls on the United States to help Britain drive the Axis out of North Africa; open a second front assault on the "soft spots" of southern Europe and launch an all-out-attack on Jap-held Burma. Commenting on U. S. aid to her allies, the 1940 GOP presidential nominee said it has been "tragically small."

ing note in a tuneful and well-constructed little Menuetto.

As for the individual artists, you could start with any one of them and not pick a minor performer.

Certainly, if you picked Janos Scholtz, 'cellist, you would choose an artist of first rank. He proved that with his tonal wizardry in the playing of the Arioso from Bach's Cantata No. 156. He added to the proof with technical brilliance in Senaille's Allegro Spirituoso. He climaxed his performance in the alternating richtoned "lassan" and sprightly "friska" passages of the Brahms Hungarian Rhapsody.

Credit should go quickly to Carlos Salzedo, head of the ensemble, for his piano accompaniment in the Rhapsody and probably even more so to his accompaniment of his wife's harp rendition of Ravel's Introduction and Allegro.

Musically, the Ravel number was probably the most interesting on the program and it gave Marjorie Call Salzedo ample opportunity to show her ability to make the harp a virtuoso instrument and not just something that tinkles cadenzas in a symphony or plays folk tunes soothingly.

This quality of the harp was demonstrated again—and well—in the numbers played by Carlos Salzedo, himself. They were four of his own compositions: Mirage, Behind the Barracks, and Yankee Trot (on the program) and Whirlwind (played as an encore.) The playing of all four was marked by adroitness and showmanship.

But the audience was reminded that the harp is still an instrument well suited to light, tuneful music in the two Salzedos' playing of Rameau's La Joyeuse, Debussy's Claire de Lune, and Mendelssohn's Spinning Wheel. "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms" was used as an encore.

Little heard as a solo instrument, the flute was proven versatile by Rene LeRoy who revealed his virtuosity in Hue's Fantasie, his musical feeling in von Paradis' Sicilienne. Most popular was his playing of Rimski-Korsakoff's "Flight of the Bumble Bee." As an enchore he played an old French folk song.

Scholtz played Saint Saen's "The Swan" as an encore to his group.

Other concerts in the series will bring to Mansfield Blanche Thebom, mezzo-soprano, Dec. 16; Claudeo Arrau, pianist, Feb. 15; and Paul Robeson, baritone, April 6.

From where I sit ...

by Joe Marsh

LAST Saturday night we were settin' around Jeb Crowell's house, and from upstairs we hear the squawks those Crowell youngsters put up while their Ma was dunkin' 'em in soap and water. Causes Jeb to comment:

"Just shows how times change. Used to be a law here in America that nobody could take a bath without a doctor's prescription!"

Then we got talking about the funny laws some people have put through in this country—like the state where they made it against the law to wake a man up if he's sleeping on the railroad tracks.

"Railroad law I once heard about," says Basil Strube, the stationmaster, "said when two trains meet at an intersection, neither can proceed until the other one has gone ahead."

"How could that be a law?" asks Pete Swanson. "That just don't make sense."

"Lots of laws don't make sense," says Jeb. "Why just think! We're livin' in a land where most folks hold for tolerance and understanding. And yet it wasn't so long ago we had a law of Prohibition. Account for that, if you can."

Well, he had us there. Here's America—where we set so much store on seein' the other fellow's point of view—havin' such a law. Now that it's all over, it's hard to realize how people put up with a law like that, even as long as they did.

• • •

From where I sit, a man's got every right to enjoy a satisfyin' glass of beer when he wants to quench his thirst. Beer's a friendly drink. It's a drink of moderation, too. And most folks—even the ones that don't drink beer themselves—are tolerant enough, nowadays, to respect the rights of folks who do.

I reckon Jeb was right—we've had some mighty strange laws in this country.

WILLKIE SCORES ROOSEVELT'S CONDUCT OF WAR

Charges Allies Get 'Boasts and Promises' Instead of Real Help.

will carry the supplies for which our Allies wait.

But he said the immediate need was for the American people and their leaders to begin to think and act offensively, to begin to mobilize, not for defense, but for attack.

Willkie pleaded that we organize now to win the peace as surely as we are going to win the war.

"To win that peace," he said, "three things seem to be necessary:

"1. We must plan for peace on a global basis.

"2. The world must be free, economically and politically for nations and for men that peace may exist in it.

"3. America must play an active, constructive part in freeing it and keeping its peace."

He said Russia and China were beginning to question our promises, not only on shipments of war materials but on the kind of a world we are fighting to create.

He called the roll of global problems—India, definition of war aims, new fighting fronts, movement of lend-lease aid to our Allies—and reported that in the areas he visited the United States is under suspicion on all of them. Rightly or wrongly, he said, the Atlantic Charter seems less than adequate to those teeming millions who are thinking in terms of charters for the Indian ocean or the Pacific.

"We are punching holes in our reservoir of good will every day," Willkie said, "by failing to define clearly our war aims. The 200,000,000 people of Russia and the 450,000,000 people of China —people like you and me—are bewildered and anxious. They know what they are fighting for. They are not so sure of us. Many of them have read the Atlantic Charter. Rightly or wrongly, they are not satisfied. They ask: What about a Pacific Charter; what about a World Charter?"

"The people of the east," he continued, "who would like to count on us are doubtful." They cannot ascertain from our government's wishy-washy attitude toward the problem of India what we are likely to feel at the end of the war about all the other hundreds of millions of eastern peoples. They cannot tell from our vague and vaccilating talk whether or not we really do stand for freedom, or what we mean by freedom.

"India," Willkie said, "is our problem."

He proposed to solve it and the problems of the Middle East, Africa, the Arab world, China and the whole Far East, in general by aggressive United Nations acceptance of a definite concept of freedom.

"Freedom," he said, "means the orderly but scheduled abolition of the colonial system."

"The record of this war to date is not such as to inspire in us any sublime faith in the infallibility of our military and naval experts. Let's have no more of this nonsense. Military experts, as well as our leaders, must be constantly exposed to democracy's greatest driving power—the whip lash of public opinion, developed from honest, free discussion. Men with great power usually like to live free of criticism. But when they get that way, that's the time to increase the criticism."

MECHANIC HELD AS SABOTEUR

Son Gives Tip After Father Talks For Hitler.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—A 63-year-old mechanic, who remarked "this country would be just as well off under Hitler," was held in jail today as a saboteur on a tip supplied by his son.

Police Sergeant Myron M. Shattuck of suburban Lakewood said the mechanic was picked up for investigation after his 28-year-old son reportedly told how he had put emery dust in grease used on machinery at the West Steel Castings Co.

An investigation at the West Steel Castings Co., a war plant where the father had been employed for the past two years, showed that the concern had experienced machinery troubles since last February. Shattuck announced.

READY TO ACT

OPA to Press Charges in Big Auto Tire Black Market.

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—OPA officials declared today they were ready to press cases before a federal grand jury against 200 persons allegedly involved in a five-state "black market" which disposed of $1,500,000 worth of automobile tires.

The loosely-knit ring, which operated in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts and the District of Columbia, was charged with cornering and selling 15,000 new tires; 1,090 recapped tires and 1,000 new tubes.

Revelation of the "black market's" existence and downfall followed a six-weeks probe by OPA agents. Customers of the ring, it was said, included a minister, several lawyers, doctors and city and state officials. Operations were assertedly carried on by personal contacts and "steerers," and prices ranged from $40 to $60 a tire.

The official Stefani news agency admitted, the dispatch said, that 354 persons, chiefly aged persons, women and children were killed at the entrance to the shelter.

CHAPTER XXXI

The table looked the same as it had a year ago with the diminutive silver tree, trimmed with diminutive red balls in the center of it. Edith sighed both from fatigue and from the disquieting thoughts that this Christmas of 1941 awakened. Though Ron was a husband and a father and the other two were girls, the war had touched all three. It had filled Allison, who had never thought of death, with a terrible fear of a terrible death. It had claimed Ron voluntarily. And it had made Temple a wife and then a widow.

Grandmother Hallett said, "Grace, children. Allison, say Grace, dear"

Temple bowed her dark head and made her red mouth firm so as to control its trembling. A year ago . . . Only a year ago when her failure to finish college had been the major tragedy of her life—only a year ago when there had been no Jud, no Abby, no Paula, when Pearl Harbor had been associated in her mind with the exquisite beauty of a place she hoped some day to visit . . . Only a year ago when she had never heard of a man named Douglas MacArthur . . . Only a year ago when she had bought things made in Japan . . . Only a year ago when Harry had been a man she thought she was going to see that night for the last time

Ron picked up the carving knife.

"I'm not starting my diet until after today," he said

Allison giggled, "I'm not either!"

It was not the same as it had been a year ago, Temple thought For tonight she would not walk across the campus with Harry and listen to music in the Renyold's living-room She wished that she could. That part of last Christmas she wished she could live over again.

After dinner Ron left his family standing on the porch in the snow as he walked to the station with two well-nigh empty traveling bags in his hand. Several times he turned about and waved He was in high spirits. Once he stooped down and scooped up a handful of snow and made a snowball and hurled it back against the steps of the old house.

Temple put on her old ice skates and went to the lake with Allison. Many of the girls and young men she had known at the university were on the lake that afternoon and welcomed her. A few walked home with her, stopping on the way at a drug store. The store was crowded with familiar faces and with newer, fresher faces. She drank hot chocolate and ate a sandwich as she had done hundreds of times there in the past. She did not look different from the other girls in their careless sport clothes and hoods and bright wool gloves. But she felt different and she knew that she was no longer one of them and that, had she accepted Paula's offer, she would never have been one of them again. Their talk and interests were not hers now and much of their slang was unintelligible. That, too, was a passing dream.

She arrived in Washington late one afternoon As she passed a newsstand in the station, her eyes caught a large picture of Abby on the front page. She bought the paper quickly and read that Miles was one of the heroes of the Philippines . . . Below Abby's picture were printed the words, 'Fiancee of a Hero." . . . It was a new picture of Abby with her new hair-do and a soft white collar on a dark dress . . . Fiancee of a Hero! Abby, so plain that no one had turned to look at her until one night last August, would be looked at now by millions all over the land . . . Abby fiancee of a hero!

With the paper under her arm, Temple went into a phone booth and called Paula at a small hotel in the center of town While the operator rang, Temple thought, "This is my world now . . . Paula and Abby and Harry and new work . . . My world is a war world It's the world of my whole generation."

In a few minutes Washington would be blacked out

Temple and Harry had had dinner, and had come up to the apartment of his friends The friends had gone out for the evening conveniently, Temple thought so that she and Harry could have their last evening together here Another last evening

"Let me have your coat and hat Temple We'll just about get settled before the black-out begins"

She took off her hat, the same small black hat with the misty veil and her beaver jacket Having no use for frivolous hats where she was going, she was leaving it with Abby She was wearing the black dress with the pleated skirt and tall-heeled black suede pumps

Harry put her coat and hat and his uniform coat in the hall closet and then turned off the lights in the apartment. But it was not dark The light of the winter moon made the living-room light enough to smoke in comfort.

Temple was standing by the window when he joined her. They said nothing as they watched the lights go out one by one and saw the air raid wardens walking up and down the street Tears burned angrily behind Temple's eyes and the air in the comfortable room seemed to blow hot, then cold upon her

Everything had been done, she thought. The letter had been written to her mother, telling her where she was going and she had said good-bye to Abby at noon. Abby had talked about Miles and General MacArthur. She had said, "Isn't it strange, Temple? Of all the people in the world Miles and I are the two you would have suspected least of being caught in the limelight . . . He's been decorated But more important than any of that he's still alive . . . I may be wrong, but I feel now that he has earned the right to stay alive"

At dinner Temple had told Harry she was going to Alaska in a group of clerks, canteen workers and nurses. She had accepted the opportunity eagerly and he had accepted her decision with good grace The trip would be long and tedious, Paula had told her and living would be makeshift until more substantial quarters could be built No pretty picture had been painted verbally to the group that had assembled this afternoon for the last time before the journey began tomorrow.

After the meeting, Temple had gone back to Paula's small hotel room and packed the warm clothing recently bought, leaving out only the frivolous hat and shoes and dress to wear on her last evening in Washington

For could she deny a small festive spirit and a heightening of her senses when she had come down on the elevator in Paula's hotel and found Harry waiting? She had felt guilty at the surging of her pulse before that commanding figure but she could not deny it . . . Nor could she deny that the feel of his hands through her white gloves was anything but reassuring and—yes, more than that, life-giving A man takes your hands and holds them firmly and whatever it is that makes life sharp and sweet to you circulates through you again . . . She had drawn her hands away, but the old vitality and curiosity was returning to her eyes.

Now as she stood beside him at the window he said, 'It's the effrontery of a few men which makes it necessary for the lights to go out in Washington that makes me burn with a cold fury."

She nodded. "You didn't say very much about my going away"

"I'd be crazy if I wanted you to go I don't want you to go any more than I wanted this war. But . . . but we still have time for the biggest and best love affair of this or any year Was that poorly timed? Some things have to be now. I'd rather say them than write them I can understand about you and Jud."

"All war marriages aren't wrong When two people are sure as Abby and Miles are sure"

"I'm talking about us, Temple."

"What about us?"

Temple turned her eyes from the deserted streets lighted only by the winter moon and looked at him He was smiling It was a smile meant for her alone, a smile in which there was humor and tolerance and passion and understanding, an infinite understading that seemed to penetrate the deep dark corners of her and put light and warmth and strength there

He said "You know, we have a little ceremony we've neglected Last year we drank wine before you went away There's some in the decanter in the dining-room . . . Any crash you hear will be my stumbling over a chair '

But he did not stumble She heard the tinkle of thin glasses and presently he came back with the wine in the glasses

"Temple, here's to the girls who wait and the girls who take the place of men Here's to one girl in particular who is taking a man's place in Alaska God bless her and bring her safely back to me I love her very dearly"

Her eyes filled and she was trembling She managed to say, "Thank you, Harry. Here's to—all the men who go out to fight Here's to one in particular who—who loves me I don't know why."

"I'm glad you don't know why, Temple I'm glad you don't know how you look standing here by this window now . . . No. I'm not going to touch you I want to, but I don't want to kiss you good-bye. That's why I didn't kiss you the night before you came to Washington I didn't want to kiss you good-bye. I want to kiss you when you come back and I can kiss you more than once . . . The lights are on The blackout is over . . . But we still have unfinished business, Temple '

"We'll have to let it go at that"

'And win a war first When I can put on civilian clothes."

'And I'm not buying railroad tickets" She was smiling now

'And advertisements tell you to buy, not to conserve and the dear old Sunday drivers are driving to their hearts' content Remember?"

He moved closer and looked at her eyes, her mouth, the clear line of her face "You still don't know why? I'll tell you some day But I want a long time to tell you, long days and long nights We still have time. We still have lots of time . . . I'm going to get your things now We've said all the important things and you have quite a day ahead of you tomorrow."

When she put on her hat before the mirror in the hall, he said, I'll even remember that silly hat, Temple"

They drove to Paula's hotel along streets brilliantly lighted again They parted on the steps of the hotel, a simple parting between a man in uniform and a pretty girl in a fur jacket. People brushed by them as he held her hands

She said, "I'll write you, I—I want to say something to you, but I don't quite know what it is . . . I think it's that I'm proud you love me. It makes me feel a part of something and someone '

"You belong to yourself, darling You belong to yourself again. This isn't the end . . . We'll both come back, Temple. We'll both come home."

It was Temple now who held his hands She said, her eyes lighting up, "You just told me what I wanted to say! You said . . . I have quite a day ahead tomorrow"

Wendell Willkie's Report To Nation

SUCH a "report to the nation" as was made last night by Wendell Willkie is one of the things that has been badly needed—a frank but friendly discussion of world conditions as related to the United Nations' war activities, and the part that the United States must play in winning the war and, later, in establishing a peace which will assure against injustices in every part of the world.

It is unlikely that a better man could be chosen to make this report than Mr. Willkie, who in the 1940 election received more than twenty-two million votes for the presidency and who has at all times been a forthright speaker in behalf of the national war effort, before and after Pearl Harbor.

Emphasis, throughout the speech, was placed on the "reservoir of good will" toward America, which Mr. Willkie found among all of the allied nations during his recent round-the-world trip, and his principal concern is that leaks in this reservoir be repaired, so that they will neither weaken fighting power nor interfere with post-war peace negotiations.

Sharp criticism of the small extent to which the United States has thus far supplied war equipment to Allied fighting forces, and reiteration of his support of second front action in Europe at the earliest possible moment, was coupled with Mr. Willkie's contention that Americans are within their rights in making suggestions about the conduct of the war—"military, industrial, economic and political."

"Military experts," he said, "as well as our leaders, must be constantly exposed to democracy's greatest driving power—the whip-lash of public opinion, developed from honest, free discussion."

Mr. Willkie's talk made clear what many Americans have suspected—that the United States is still far from the all-out war activity of which this country is capable, and that this must come before the war can be won.

Coffee To Be Rationed--Eventually

ANNOUNCEMENT that coffee rationing will be started November 28, with no retail sales permitted during the week preceding that date, carries no explanation of why actual rationing is deferred for another month, or why it was delayed until the present chaotic condition came about.

The rationing process decided upon—use of coupons from "the sugar books"—has been suggested by newspapers over the country many times in recent weeks, and is so elementary that even a Washington bureaucrat might have thought of it without outside aid.

Also, probably after ponderous thinking, Price Administrator Henderson reaches the conclusion that rationing is made necessary mainly because of "excessive buying by consumers."

With coupons already in the hands of prospective purchasers, there is no apparent good reason why retail coffee stocks (if any) shouldn't have been "frozen" during THIS week and rationing started NEXT Saturday, instead of a month from now.

A situation approaching the ridiculous has been reached in Mansfield where grocers report being entirely sold out of a popular coffee "substitute"—and are now looking around for a substitute for the substitute.

Patriotic Halloween Urged

ANOTHER opportunity to help in the war effort will be given children of this community during the present week and through the Halloween month-end.

This will be to see to it that no plans for Halloween festivities include anything in the way of property damage or destruction, and that the practice of letting air out of automobile tires is abandoned.

Possibly their recent work in gathering scrap metal has given Mansfield children a new appreciation of the value of things which had heretofore been regarded as suitable for removal during Halloween pranks. It is now being pointed out that there are scarcities in many lines and some of the articles taken by thoughtless children cannot be replaced.

It should also be remembered that tires can be ruined by release of air and that every tire is now vitally important.

City and county officials have issued warnings against Halloween depredations this year and it is suggested that all patriotic young people might well suspend customary Halloween practices "for the duration."

Mansfield is to have a community Halloween party next Friday night, with parade and entertainment which should serve to meet all requirements for a jolly but harmless observance of this occasion, and parents are asked to cooperate by urging their children to avoid any conduct that might detract from enjoyment of this event.

Time To Mail Overseas Gifts

ONLY a few days remain in which to mail Christmas gifts to men in the armed services overseas—Saturday being the final day for mailing in advance of the November 1 deadline which falls on Sunday.

It is required that parcels be securely wrapped and not more than 18 inches long or above 11 pounds in weight, a shoe box being mentioned as the most convenient approximate size.

Intoxicants, inflammable materials and perishable matter are not accepted for mailing.

The address should be plainly written, including name, rank, serial number, branch of service or ship, and postoffice through which packages are to be routed.

If you plan to send a Christmas present to a relative or friend overseas, including Alaska, remember to mail it this week.

Speeders Should Be Told

WEEK-END arrests of speeders in Mansfield and vicinity indicate that at least a few motorists haven't heard about the war—or the shortage of rubber.

Arrests inside the city involved charges of speed anywhere from 51 to 70 miles an hour—with 35 miles as the legal limit on streets that are a part of state and federal highways, and a 25-maximum on other streets.

If you see anyone who hasn't heard about the war—or about the national speed limit of 35 miles an hour—maybe you'd better tell 'em—if they can hear, as it is quite obvious that they do not read.

Bombs or Leaflets Over Germany?

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Early in the war—back in the fall of 1939—British planes were busy dropping leaflets over Germany. The theory was that public opinion in that country could be worked up against its war mad rulers. One of the stories popular at the time was about a pilot given a certain route, with instructions to drop the leaflets. He came back half an hour ahead of schedule, and his superiors wanted to know how he had done it.

"I just dropped the whole bundle and came home," he replied.

"You fool," said his chief, "you might have hurt somebody."

The fact that this story was popular proves better than any other evidence the annoyance of many "practical", persons about such use of pilots and planes. Most critics thought the planes should be dropping bombs.

But the advocates of propaganda are at it again. Recently an American woman who had spent much of her childhood in Germany, and hence spoke German without a Yankee accent, broadcast over shortwave to the women of Germany. It was a good broadcast. Its arguments seemed to the writer, and to various women whom he has interviewed on the subject, to be persuasive.

Reports from secret sources inside Germany, according to officials, show that it was widely heard despite the drastic penalties for listening to any foreign broadcasts.

THE QUESTION now is whether it would be worth while to print some hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of copies of this broadcast and drop them, as leaflets, over Germany.

That question is now being considered by high officials of both the U. S. and the British governments. There is no thought here by the writer of trying to pass on its merits. The serious question is whether propaganda directed to the German people, and German women in this particular instance, is as valuable as the bombs which the same planes and pilots could be distributing with equal expenditure of flying time by men and machines.

Most men are inclined to say that they prefer that every plane capable of dropping anything on Germany should drop bombs. Many women hold that the propaganda, if good enough, might be far more effective in the long run. It is not a question of whether this particular broadcast is ideal. It is a question of whether ANY propaganda is as good as bombs in reaching the goal of ultimate collapse by Germany.

"You notice," said one of the critics, "that this proposal is applied only to Germany — not to Japan. But the control of the people is just as complete in Germany as it is in Nippon. This means that what the people may think in either country is utterly unimportant. Only force can win the war."

The point seems to have merit—and yet—it was the collapse of German morale which ended the last war, not the crushing defeat of her armies in the field. As a matter of fact they were never driven from French soil.

* * *

SO THERE are two sides to it. But a lot of us wish that we had more planes out in the Solomons, and up in the Aleutians, instead of so many near Germany that the problem of dropping leaflets is actually being weighed!

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Friday, Oct. 27, 1922.

Four hundred and eighty schoolboys from Upper Sandusky were brought to Mansfield to visit Y. M. C. A., the state reformatory and several factories.

Ground was broken for addition to New Method Stove company's plant on Elm street.

It was noted that Robert, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Culler, 201 Bowman street, had a remarkable gift for whistling.

S. Finn Bell underwent operation at General hospital.

W. H. DeGraff was elected president of Grace Episcopal brotherhood.

Mrs. Louis N. Remy, 54, died at her home, 25 East First street.

Party was given for Claud Etzwiler, 112 North Walnut street, on his tenth birthday anniversary.

Cyclamen club held family Halloween party at Arthur Beck home in Woodland.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Upon the suggestion of Theodore Roosevelt, jr., at that time Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Navy day was inaugurated on Oct. 27, 1922. The date selected because it marked the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, whose efforts were instrumental in forming a sound naval policy for the United States.

Listen World!

Junk That Scrap!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THERE'S one thing you'll have to do if you want to win this war—or fit into the new world which will follow it: YOU'LL HAVE TO GET RID OF THAT SCRAP.

No, I don't mean those old gadgets you have stored in the basement, nor the broken screens, tin cans and rusty pie plates. They represent a No. 1 urgency, all right. But there's another kind of scrap littering every life in this land, trash which is not only a nuisance to you but a menace to the world at large. And that's—

EMOTIONAL SCRAP.

THOSE MENTAL AND SENTIMENTAL ODDS AND ENDS WHICH YOU'VE HOARDED YEAR AFTER YEAR, BLOCKING NEW LIFE, RAISING CAIN WITH YOUR ATTITUDE TODAY.

Chances are you've never thought of that kind of scrap . . . never realized how much space it occupied in your life or how much michief it was doing. But stop and think now.

There are those haunting, homesick memories of the past which you unconsciously use as an escape from the painful pressure of the present.

Those corroding resentments which go back to your very beginnings, those fears, feuds and trivial jealousies which you add to, year after year.

Those antiquated notions and superstitions which should have gone out with Grandma's bustle.

Those festering regrets for the mistakes you can no longer mend. Ever stop to think that it's as sinful to waste your time mourning over a mistake as it was to commit it in the first place?

Those cherished sorrows you cannot bear to part with. What right have you to coddle your broken heart when all the world is gripped by despair?

They're Scrap—every one of them. Moldy, malicious scrap which should have been junked years ago, not only for your individual progress but for the public welfare. You throw out a busted bed spring because it's something tangible; you can see it, realize its uselessness. But Thoughts are just as tangible and far more dangerous. "Thoughts are things"—things which take up an actual space in your life, handicap your growth and drain your energy.

Emotional scrap, there's the deadliest menace to human progress. It can and will wreck any personal life that hoards it. Consider this present war. We could have escaped Pearl Harbor—and all its subsequent tragedy—if we had been willing, years ago, to junk our old, stupid notions and listen to the free minds that looked ahead. Twenty years ago, W. R. Hearst and General MacArthur's father were warning us of the "Yellow Peril." Today "Billy" Mitchell and Arthur Brisbane, seeing our Flying Fortresses, may well rise from their graves and cry, "We told you so!"

Chances are you're neither a general nor a journalist. But you are a unit of that Public Opinion which molds the destiny of any nation. And your secret Scrap Pile is as responsible for the bottlenecking of our war effort as the machinations of any saboteur.

GET RID OF YOUR EMOTIONAL SCRAP!

GET RID OF IT NO MATTER HOW CLOSELY IT IS TANGLED WITH YOUR HEART STRINGS OR YOUR TEMPER.

SWEEP AWAY YOUR PAST AS THOROUGHLY AS YOU ARE CLEANING YOUR ATTIC.

GET FREE AND GET GOING ON THE VICTORY TRAIL!

Jackpot for Jobholders.

If these were ordinary times, the world's largest office building, just being completed in Washington, would be getting more of the attention it deserves.

Here is the jackpot for jobholders in the capital, a sprawling monument to the triumph of brueaucracy in the United States.

Statistics on the monstrosity, known as the "Pentagon," deal with incredible distances and spaces, but they merely reflect the incredible numbers of paper clippers and rubber stampers now populating Washington. The "Pentagon" alone will house no less than 40,000 of the millions of federal employes supposedly needed to look after the welfare of voters.

Perhaps in the years to come it may be one of the most favored objectives of tourists wanting to see the Washington native in his habitat.—Canton Repository.

Interpreting the War News

Hope Allied Offensive In Egypt Will Doom Axis African Thrust

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

LONDON—The British offensive in Egypt may develop into one of the decisive engagements of the war, but at this early stage we must content ourselves with the fact that the Allies finally have seized the offensive there and that they have made considerable progress in fierce fighting.

The great stake involved is control of the Mediterranean and the Middle East. He who dominates this vital area will win the war.

Long ago, when the Russo-Nazi conflict first began, I was asked to give a standard whereby readers could gauge the daily progress of the war themselves.

I offered this:

If Hitler could reach the lower Caucasus and the Middle East he would have gone far toward winning the war. This was so because he would have acquired rich oil fields and other resources without which he could not hope for victory and he would have secured strategic bases calculated to enable him to break Britain's hold on the Mediterranean.

If the Nazi chief did not succeed in this great addition, he would be beaten.

The Nazi all-highest decided on a vast pincers movement.

The left arm of the pincers was represented by his drive against the Russian Caucasus. The right prong was Rommel's thrust against Egypt from Libya.

Well, the fueher's left prong appears to have come a cropper against the cold waters of the Volga. His right claw also got held up because he couldn't give Rommel the support necessary to continue the offensive against Egypt.

As things stand, if the Allies can drive the Boche and their unhappy Italian henchmen out of northern Africa, we shall have completed an operation which deprives Hitler of his all but dead hope of wresting victory out of the war.

The battle line now is confined to a comparatively narrow strip of desert between the Mediterranean on the north and the great Qattara depression on the south.

Within this space lie many ridges. Among them the Germans and Italians have "dug themselves in" after the manner of the last war and have fortified their position strongly with mine fields and artillery.

As a result it wasn't possible for the Allies to follow the customary procedure of modern desert fighting and to attack with the tanks leading. It would be suicidal for the tanks to rush in against emplaced artillery.

Thus we see Montgomery opening up the way with a heavy bombardment from the air and artillery and by use of infantry in many places.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Come time to pay it, the new federal tax bill is going to knock the noggin off so many people that that old word "complacency" will be lost to the language.

This country is as much of a hodge-podge economically as it is geographically so nobody is going to be able to set up any tables and say: "Here, brother, is just what you are up against."

There is, however, one little group here in Washington that is a pretty fair example of what some of us are going to be up against. That's the $1,440-a-year, or minimum pay, government clerks. Many of them are girls.

NOT many months ago, the department of labor went into the "minimum costs of a decent living standard" for government girls pretty thoroughly. If the department of labor statisticians had any axe to grind, try and find it. They weren't after getting wages up or down. They were only trying to set up a minimum budget by which government girls, at starting salaries could exist. The total, according to this estimate, was $1,313.08.

To itemize it here would take more space than I have, but just to give you an idea of how ungenerous the DL was being with its estimates, it allowed only $13 for "miscellaneous" and only $29 for the year for savings.

Since then, times have changed considerably. There's that 5 per cent for the federal retirement fund, $72 a year, on which Miss G. Girl will realize when she arrives at the ripe age of 60.

Then there's 10 per cent for War Savings bonds. This isn't compulsory, of course, but the pressure can be pretty terrific when every one around you is doing his or her bit in that direction. That means $144 more.

Now comes the tax—the spanknew federal tax. That will be in the neighborhood of $170.

Add it up. The G-Girl who used to hit that minimum budget on the nose and come out with $100 or so to the good for a trip home or some other luxury, now is going to come out $100 to $250 minus, depending on how patriotic she is in buying those war bonds.

ALL this is, of course, hypothetical, even in Washington. How can you set down any minimum figure for decent rentals in a city where it is discovered that 133 soldiers (studying radio engineering) are paying $20 a month apiece for cot space in a converted warehouse?

On the other hand, some compassionate landlords and ladies are providing very decent rooms at less than that.

Some G-Girls, according to bureau counselors, earn minimum wages and send money home every month, but just how they manage it is a mystery to the counselors. Perhaps some of the story is told in the rapidly rising curve of personal loans to government employes in the lower brackets.

Man About Manhattan

Dauntless Eddie

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — When I was considerably younger I used to delight in a Saturday afternoon's Wild West bill of fare at the neighborhood movie house. The chief attraction was dauntless Eddie Polo, who shot so many bad men that the sound effects man couldn't keep up with him. (The sound effects man in those days sat in the first row, and every time there was gunfire on the screen, he slapped a leather chair seat with a slat.)

In my more mature years I have been mildly curious over the declining marksmanship of screen heroes, but now I know the answer. The rates for being killed have gone up from something like $10 a day to $35. And when you're making western pictures on a small budget, podner, you only kill off the snakes-in-the grass that need killin' bad.

I've just learned that, and a few other things about westerns, from Roy Rogers, one of the top screen cowboys of the era, and the name attraction of the recent rodeo in Madison Square Garden. Among them that most of the best cowboys come from New York state, that a horse can be housebroken, and that fake fights screen better than real ones.

ROY works for Republic, which figures that when Judy Canova kicks the hero in the pants it's funnier than anything William Powell says to Myrna Loy.

He is—or I wouldn't be writing this—one of the most unaffected and companionable film stars to show up in these parts in many a harvest moon. Like many youngsters' cowboy idols, he doesn't drink or smoke in public, but I found during a dinner-for-four in a private dinin room at the Hotel Dixie that he doesn't drink or smoke much anyway.

He gets quite a kick out of the fact that he, a film cowboy, was born in Cincinnati and was brought up on a farm near Portsmouth, O., and was more interested originally in choral singing.

WHEN ROY starts talking about his Palomino horse, "Trigger," he really loosens up. Trigger is one of the few stallions ever used by a lead performer in westerns. Usually they're considered too fractious. He is about six years old, and Roy has had him for five. He can do 45 miles an hour on the straightaway, and Roy would like to put him up against Whirlaway in a hundred-yard sprint.

Funny thing about these westerns, the hero seldom if ever kisses the girl. That's on the film companies' assumption that youngsters don't like "mush." Roy things it's the film companies who are being juvenile.

"I was on a theater tour once," he said in his authentic western twang, "and I got to thinking about that. I said to the kids, 'I'll bet every one of you here has got a girl.' And they just sat and squirmed."

A Farmer's Diary

Chestnutting

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I KNEW where there were fruiting sprouts of chestnut in a woods just south of here. I saw them bloom the latter part of June, and later observed a dozen large, vigorous shiny burs. A week ago I passed that way again, and with more serious intent.

I found but eight still clinging. Each had split, revealing the dark brown velvety lining. Some of the nuts had already dropped among the leaves. I stirred them with my foot, and when I found none, I thought aloud that likely they were wormy or they would not have fallen.

With a thin forked branch, I pulled each treasure to my hand, until I had a small bulging pocketful of bright plump chestnuts. I examined them with delight, as a miser counts his gold.

While so absorbed, I did not hear an approaching shower of rain until it suddenly poured down upon me. I glanced quickly around for shelter. More than 200 yards down through the brushy glen, I saw where a massive tree had fallen northwestward and left massive roots held perpendicular to a height of 12 feet. I had almost reached this place when a hen pheasant and her good-sized brood of youngsters flew out before me, into the storm.

I came into the sheltered spot and shook the water from my coat and hat. It seemed warm in this hollow — almost like a room. I heard the roaring wind and rain outside. I stepped about, observing the curious roots when a sound like thunder shook the small enclosure, and a mother quail took her brood away, flying with them against the wind to a mossy elm snag.

Above my head, a bit of root and sod extended like a small flat roof and the raveled edge turned down like a flimsy curtain. Hanging from this tiny roof I saw ten dark objects that appeared like unusually dark cocoons. I touched one with the end of the stick. It became alive and flew out into the shower. The other nine remained with no sign of life, head downward, supported by one claw. The dark fuzzy wings were wrapped about like cloaks. I touched another and all flew away.

Where the bats had hung, were long uneven crypts made and egged by the queen of the mason wasps. A curious chipmunk watched me, and finally grabbed a chestnut which I had balanced on the toe of my shoe. A yellow hammer believed I did not see him wedged in between two heavy roots, and remained hidden. A vagrant crab crept slowly out of a bubbly place at the edge of a puddle. No man is alone in the woods—not even beneath a friendly overhanging root.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

CLUB WOMEN HEAR TALKS ON OHIOANS

THE MEMBERS of the Victorian club enjoyed a delightful luncheon and program when Mrs. Robert S. Gibson entertained yesterday. The topic of the program "Ohio's Men and Women of Letters" was presented by Mrs. C. W. Jelliff, and Mrs. J. Clarke Custer. Mrs. Jelliff, in her unusually informative talk stated that Ohio began early to write for herself, and that she had never lacked writers either in number or in greatness. The Ohioana Library in Columbus contains at present books or pamphlets by 16,000 authors, excluding those in anthology and a growing bibliography list. There are some 3,000 more writers connected with Ohio not yet represented in the collection, though they are universally known. Everybody knows Phoebe Carry's "Nearer Home" and Daniel Emmett's "Dixie." Every type and form of writing has been cultivated in the century and a half of Ohio history. From this great field of literary endeavor Mrs. Jelliff chose to speak of Frank George Carpenter, Helen Loomis Linham and Paul Laurence Dunbar. She described Mr. Carpenter, a native of Mansfield, as a world traveler and hunter of ideas. She told of the high honor Helen Loomis Linham received for her "The Blind Girl Speaks," and and from the works of Mr. Dunbar, one of the greatest negro poets, she beautifully recited "The Boogah Man." In closing this talk of writers, with whom she seemed to have lived for weeks, she mentioned that Ohio is the only state that celebrates a poetry day by an act of legislature, the third Friday of October

As Mrs. Custer reviewed this galaxy, she mentioned William Maxwell, the learned editor of a newspaper called "The Sentinel of the Northwestern Territory," published 10 years before Ohio became a state, and Harriett Beecher Stowe who wrote her great novel in Cincinnati. A copy of a McGuffey reader was amusingly shown. The speaker read a descriptive paragraph from Louis Broomfield's "The Farm," spoke of Charles Allen Smart of Chillicothe and closed with a colorful and amusing reading from a book by Claire MacMurray.

A quotation from a chapter in Dr. Harlan Hatcher's book "Buckeye Country" which reads "for in letters as in politics, commerce and geography, Ohio is as she always has been, alive and verile as the crossroads of the nation," closed the program.

The next meeting is to be a 1 o'clock luncheon at the Women's Club on Nov. 9 with Mrs. C. H. Huston the hostess.

Cheer Up, Gals, New Rayon Stockings Aren't So Bad!

By DOROTHY ROE
Wide World Fashion Editor

Dear Miss or Mrs USA: You might just as well stop lamenting your dear-departed silk and nylon stockings, because that's all there is, there isn't any more.

The thing to do now is dry those tears, get a firm grip on yourself and prepare to be surprised at the progress that has been made in improving rayon stockings. From now on, you know, you're going to be wearing rayons whether you like it or not, unless you prefer to paint your legs—and that still seems a trifle chilly for winter. You may, of course, adopt heavy ribbed and mesh wools and cottons for sports and country wear, but you'll still need rayons for dress. So you'd better learn how to get the most for your money.

Insist On Fit.

In the first place, you must remember that it's most important to buy the correct foot size and leg length in rayon hosiery — it hasn't as much elasticity as silk or nylon, and to look well it must fit perfectly. When rayon stretches it stays stretched until it's washed, so if your foot is slender, you probably will take a half size smaller than you have been buying in nylon. For the same reason, avoid too-long hose, and be sure you buy stockings with a deep double welt or adjustable top, to give you leeway for tightening your garters, if necessary.

Make sure that the stockings have sufficient reinforcement at toe, heel and sole. Many rayon stockings have cotton reinforcements at toe and heel. If your feet perspire, it is wise to buy these, as rayon is weakened when damp.

Dry Thoroughly.

Rayon stockings, like all others, give better service if they are washed immediately after wearing. Don't try to wash rayon hose at night and wear them the next morning. Buy enough so that you can alternate wear, and allow two full days for the stockings to become thoroughly dry after washing

In selecting the weight you desire in the new rayon hose, you will have to learn a new set of terms, different from those used in describing silk. Sheerness in silk stockings was determined by the number of threads twisted together to make the knitting yarn —2-thread was very sheer, 3-thread slightly heavier, and so on. In rayon stockings, a single thread of selected size determines the sheerness. The term used to denote the thread size is "denier," pronounced "den-yer." A given length of 50-denier thread would weigh 50 ounces, the same length of 75-denier thread would weigh 75 ounces. The higher the denier, the heavier the weight of the stocking. These comparisons will help when you are buying rayon hose:

50 denier rayon is comparable in sheerness to 3 to 4 thread in silk.

75 denier rayon—5 to 6 thread silk.

100 denier rayon — 7 thread silk.

The size of the knitting stitch also contributes to the weight and sheerness. This factor is defined as "gauge" and is used in connection with rayons in exactly the same way as it was with silk. A 45-gauge is standard, 42-gauge is used in heavier stockings and extra-sheer stockings are knit in fine gauge, 48 or 51.

One of the biggest improvements in rayon stockings has been achieved by increasing the twist of the yarn, to give the desired dull, crepey appearance and improve resistance to snagging. Laboratory tests show that high-twist rayon stockings snag less readily than most silks.

So cheer up — the new rayon stockings are going to surprise you with their good points.

Girl Scouts Shine 'Em Up For Victory Fund Drive

By VIVIAN BROWN
(Wide World Features Writer)

Pop's shoes are going to be shined — but regularly — and daughter is the new bootblack!

As a matter of fact, the old homestead will be a beehive of activity for the next few weeks. And all because the Girl Scouts are having a Victory Fund drive.

Each of the nation's 725,830 Girl Scouts is purchasing at least one 25-cent War Savings Stamp in addition to what she normally buys, and this stamp will be given to the fund.

Daughter has to earn some money. So, that's the reason for the elbow grease. Ma's kitchen looks spic and span, little brother's socks are being darned, and baby is well taken care of. Windows are so shiny you can use 'em for mirrors!

One troop on Staten Island, N. Y., sold rubber salvage. Another troop in Santa Barbara, Calif., sold candy, made $150 and sent it to the Girl Scouts in Hawaii, of whom there are about 5,000. Another idea was to charge admission of one War Savings Stamp to the Harvest Exhibit, the Girl Scout Victory Gardens display.

Some of these little Scouts walk or roller-skate to school, saving bus fare, do without chewing gum, candy and sundry other things, in order to swell the fund.

For even if each Scout buys just one stamp at 25 cents, $180,000 will be realized. No contributions are solicited from the public. Each girl gives her stamps to a troop leader, who sends them to national headquarters to be converted into War Bonds. Then, the bonds will be held in trust and the money used to help children anywhere in the world who have suffered from the war.

The relief fund for Girl Scouts in China is now sent directly to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and is at her disposal to be used for needy children as she directs.

The motto for the campaign is "A Joan to the Government and a Gift to the Children of the World."

Legion Auxiliary Plans Bazaar, Helps Families

When the American Legion Auxiliary met at the Legion home last evening, Mrs. Marie Dickson presided over the business session during which Mrs. Carl Kahl, child welfare chairman, reported sending clothes and groceries to needy families. Rubber soap dishes were sent to the Richland County Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

The rehabilitation and child welfare assessments were sent to the departments, and decision was made to have a bazaar in December. Members voted to give donations to the Community War Chest fund and to the Mansfield Dental Clinic.

Mrs. Dickson and Mrs. Edith Metcalf gave reports on the fall conference which was held at Sandusky on Sunday. A special citation was given to the local unit for membership. The next regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held on Nov. 9.

Brownies Observe First Anniversary

Brownie Scout Troop No. 22-B gave a surprise anniversary party for Troop 22-A at the home of Mrs. Charles Orr, 446 Shepard road, on Monday. The group was organized one year ago. Girls in Troop 22-A are former members of the other group.

The party took place following the regular meeting of Troop 22-B. Ice cream and individual cakes with single, lighted candles, were served. The cakes contained the girls' "fortunes." All present wore Halloween masks. Leaders of Troop 22-B are Mrs. Elmer Eckert and Mrs. J. R. Clemens. Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Ray Rowlands are leaders of Troop 22-A.

Formality In Services Now More Popular

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The hurried marriages of a year ago have slowed down in tempo. Girls and their soldier fiances realize that unless a miracle happens we're likely to be in this war for a long time.

Therefore, they reason, why get married as if one were snatching a sandwich at a quick-lunch counter? Why not respond to the beautiful words of the marriage ceremony with the dignity they imply?

The way today's correspondent feels about her wedding is, I think, typical. She wants to have a ceremony she and her soldier fiance can always remember with pride. She writes:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My mother is disgusted with me because I'm going to pack my wedding outfit in a suitcase —lovely white crepe dress, finger-length veil, white satin slippers —and travel halfway across the continent to marry the finest boy in the United States Army.

"Mother thinks George should get a furlough and come to our home in Massachusetts to be married. She doesn't realize that when a man's in the army, a furlough for wedding bells cannot be depended on. She argues: 'If you are going to do this mad thing —travel halfway across the United States to be married — wait a couple of months until I can afford to go with you, and cut out all that foolishness about being married in white bridal finery.'

"But that 'foolishness' is just what I wouldn't cut out for anything. George may be ordered overseas, and thinking of all the things likely to happen to a soldier, I believe it will help a lot if he remembers what a nice wedding we had.

"We're more than fortunate in knowing one of the officers stationed at the same post as George, and Captain B—is going to get his cousin's wife, who lives in a nearby town, to be on hand. After the ceremony in church, she is going to give us a reception at her home, with a real wedding cake.

"Mother does not approve of any of the arrangements, says Captain B's cousin by marriage is a stranger to us. So, in spite of marrying George, with whom I've been in love for two years, and a chance of a couple of days honeymoon, I've shed some tears over mother's grouches. Don't you think, considering the circumstances, I'm doing the right thing?

"BRIDE-TO-BE."

I do think you're doing the right thing. Suppose you did wait until the family finances warranted your mother's going along as chaperon. By that time your fiance might be on his way overseas, and there wouldn't be any wedding at all. Would you ever forgive yourself?

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Oct. 28.

The Lunar transits for this day point to much initiative and enterprise with the energies and faculties keyed up to high purpose and worthwhile ambitions. These enthusiasms, however, may lack the support or endorsement of employers, supervisors or others whose cooperation may seem necessary. Determination, persistent and constructive effort should win out to profitable and gratifying goals, with expanded finances, increase of popularity, and business and social prestige.

Those whose birthday it is are faced by a year in which their major ambitions and objectives may have to be put over by their own indomitable will, skill, practical constructive ability and enthusiasm, as there is little hope of assistance or encouragement from outsiders, employers, superiors or those in a financial position to promote worthy enterprise and initiative. However, with resolution and sound tactics there should be lucrative returns financially and enhanced personal popularity in business and socially. There may be urges to overspend.

A child born on this day should have much enterprise, ingenuity and constructive ability, with high ambitions to put over worthwhile projects. Its own force of character should carry it to success.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I turned back to Mary, putting my fingers on her wrist with gentle pressure, as Katharine taught me to awaken a sleeper, but Mary did not move a muscle, nor respond as I called her name loudly. I grasped her shoulders and shook her, but in vain.

"She's completely under," my father decided. "How about Noel? he asked, as Dicky came in.

"All out," my husband answered. "He couldn't hear the last trump if old Gabe were sounding it. But he's all right. I'm sure."

"So am I," my father said, "but I'll have to have a doctor's verdict before I'm satisfied. Where's Twitchell?" He turned to Adams imperatively.

"Milner took him along. The doctor wouldn't permit Redfield to be moved without a stretcher."

"Where are they?"

"In suite 1522. Milner said if you wanted to know anything about Redfield you could call him there."

"Nice of him," my father drawled, near to a verbal explosion. "I'll call him presently. First, I want to find out all I can from you. How did you know these two had been given a sedative?"

Warns Of Spying.

Adams shot a quick glance toward the other suite.

"I'm going to whisper," he said. "It wouldn't be so good if Milner should happen to come back—he has a key you know—and find me shooting off my mouth."

"All right," my father said, lowering his voice, "go ahead."

"Was there a coffee pot in the sitting room?"

"I didn't notice," my father said. "There wasn't one near the bed. Did you see one, Richard?"

"Not I, but I wasn't looking for one. I was busy with Noel."

"It wouldn't be near the bed," I said. "I'll look."

Finds Coffee On Tray.

"Don't touch anything," father said with an imperative note, "and come back here as soon as you have looked closely."

I hurried into the other room, stopped an instant by the couch, went on to the coffee table and to listen to Noel's breathing, then noted that a hotel tray was on it. Completing my mental inventory, but touching nothing, I hurried back.

"There's a tray on the table," I said, "of the kind room service sends up. On it are a coffee pot, a cream pitcher partly filled, a small silver plate with two lumps of sugar on it, two cups and saucers, with perhaps a spoonful of creamed coffee in each, and a plate holding a few tiny biscuits and cookies."

"Good!" my father commented. "You couldn't tell whether there was any coffee left in the coffee pot?"

"You told me not to touch anything," I replied warily, not knowing whether he was testing my obedience, or had forgotten what he had said to me.

Evidence Removed.

"So I did," he said. "Well, I'll look at it, and smell it, now."

"You'll be wasting your time, sir," Adams said respectfully, but in a whisper.

"How's that?" my father asked.

"Because," Adams said, Milner took good care of that. He switched the trays, after he was sure they both were safely under."

"You mean Milner drugged them?" my father asked. "How could he manage that, with Dr. Twitchell in the room?"

Liver Birds a Menu Feature

By BETSY NEWMAN

EVERY HOME manager is watching (or should be) for vitamin-rich, mineral-wealthy foods to serve her family. Liver contains vitamins A and B—thiamine and riboflavin—and the iron and copper needed to build blood and avoid anemia. Try Liver Birds as a change from the usual liver and bacon.

Today's Menu

Liver Birds — Baked Potatoes
Mashed Squash — Waldorf Salad
Maple Bread Pudding — Tea

Liver Birds

Bacon

Have liver cut in long, narrow slices, wash, drain and dry. Lay a slice of bacon on each slice and roll with bacon on the outside. Fasten with toothpicks and sprinkle lightly with flour. Brown quickly in hot bacon drippings, then place in baking dish and nearly cover with meat stock or hot water. Cover pan and bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 30 to 40 minutes. Season with pepper, lift rolls carefully to hot platter, and thicken gravy slightly with flour. Serve very hot.

Maple Bread Pudding

2 c. bread cubes (3 slices)
2 egg yolks
¾ c. maple syrup or cane syrup
1½ c. water
1½ c. irradiated evaporated milk
2 egg whites
Few grains salt

Beat egg yolks, add maple syrup, water, milk and bread cubes. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry, then fold in bread mixture. Pour into buttered baking dish, set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until set—about 1 hour. Serves 6.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

Train Boys and Girls In Home Responsibilities

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

What the average child in the United States lacks most, perhaps, in his upbringing is proper training to share the everyday responsibilities of his home, and this lack is far more serious with boys, as a rule, than girls. Among the numerous reasons for this lack are these.

1. His parents may have servants who not only do practically all the work about the home but also wait on him hand and foot.

2. It may not occur to the parents that sharing in the home duties and responsibilities is essential to a child's moral growth.

3. Wishing to see their child happy "here and now" and have as much freedom as his playmates, many parents, supposing they are being kind, are inclined not to expect much help about the home from children.

Other Causes.

4. A large number of parents who really believe their child, say of 12 or 15, should, as a matter of family justice and character education, help with the home chores, just don't succeed in getting the youngster to help. These parents find it easier to do all the work themselves than to train their child to assist. By this time the child's resistance to such cooperation may be very strong. The parent probably was too late in beginning the training and not too skillful in effecting it.

5. Then, too, the American atmosphere has been charged with the doctrine that the child should do only what he feels like doing and that good parents always motivate the child to help at home—just make him like to help. Ever so many parents who desire to seem modern and progressive are trying to make this philosophy work. Yet it doesn't work, and before many of these parents realize it won't work, the child has grown beyond the age when helping sufficiently at home can be effectively required of him.

6. Lingering in the muscles, bones and the nervous systems of many parents, especially fathers, is the time-worn notion that boys should not do housework—make beds, sweep, wash dishes and the like.

Rules For Parents.

1. Begin early. Train the child as soon as he is able, to care for himself. Teach self-reliance.

2. Try to make helping at home as pleasant as possible but face reality and require certain definite jobs of the boy or girl at home as soon as he is old enough to do them.

3. Let the boy take his place with his sister (or alone) with the dishpan or broom.

4. Add new jobs only after the old ones are done well as routine. Make each job inescapable, using effective penalties if necessary, but not scolding. Be reasonable.

5. When the child volunteers to help, be very appreciative. Let him also do some things he would like to do, such as he can do, but usually are done only by adults.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. Would you punish a toddler to make him come to you when you called him?

A. No; nor would I run after him. Instead I would go calmly to him and get him and, if he resisted, would talk of some of his experiences, or items of his favorite stories, hoping that he would gradually comply and cooperate.

Q. Please give some rules for preventing and correcting eating scenes in the young child.

A. 1. Neither show nor feel any emotion about the child's eating. 2. Serve one food at a time and in very small portion. 3. When this is refused, end the meal then and there, seeing that the child can get no other food till the next regular meal time. 4. Continue in this manner until desired results are had. 5. In case the child holds out for more than four successive meals, or develops nausea, call the doctor. My special bulletin on cultivating a healthy appetite and solving eating problems may be had by writing me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Hands Need Attention In Wartime

By MME. QUI VIVE

Garden workers agree as one individual that this has been a tough summer on hands. Also, with so many men away, women have been messing with paint pots, doing odd jobs they never did before. Factory workers find that their nails break easily. Not that all this matters so terribly much, but one might as well make an effort to keep the hands in order. Neglected, they soon grow old-looking.

We'll say this to the sisters: wring your hands. Wring them, not in a state of despair, but in a nice lathering of cold cream, lanoline, or cocoabutter—they're all soothing. This treatment should be done twice a week, all the year round, in the summer to keep discolorations from forming, in cold weather to avoid a chapped condition.

Don't forget that much of the renovating work is done by the friction necessary to force the oils into the flesh. It is so with the care of the complexion: don't just spread on your favorite cosmetic; that's not enough—the skin surface should be tapped and slapped to tone tissues and to accelerate the blood streams. Takes only a few minutes. Keep on applying more cream. If the skin is dry it will lap it up as a kitten laps up milk, be the better for it.

Hands should be smooth, of good coloring and texture, and they should be under control. The movements of the hands are significant. They can be awkward or graceful. The befuddled little flapper doesn't know what to do with hers. The cultured woman knows precisely how her white butterflies should behave. She holds them in her lap, fingers entwined. She poses them on chair arms. Her gestures are restrained.

Put yours through a course. Lift your arm, do a hand wave. Move your fingers one after the other. Is the wrist flexible? It should be, must be if the movements of the hand are to be easy, pleasing to the eye.

Hold the hands on a level with the elbow, palms upward. Fold in the fingers, one after another, beginning with the little one. That exercise will be helpful, if you are a bit muscle bound from hard work.

When massaging the hands with a cream, thumb each finger from palm to finger tip—front, sides and back. When treating the backs of the fingers, do little circles on each joint. Rub the cream into the finger nails. That practice will keep them from breaking and showing ridges. Continue treatment to the elbow. Give the elbow its portion of the soothing emollient.

Home girls must avoid harsh cleaning agents. When polishing silver or furniture, cotton gloves should be worn. Furniture polish is tough on mitts. Protection is half the battle.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

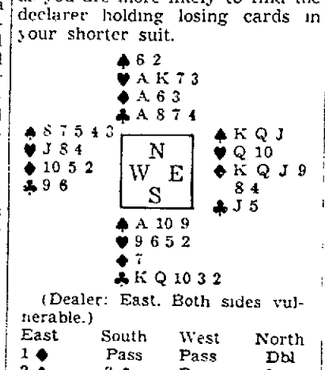
"The Authority on Authorities"

TRYING TO NIP A SLAM

DEFENSE against a constructively bid slam contract should be concentrated solely upon the best chance to take a single trick, if it is a grand slam, and two tricks, if it is a small slam. Against a mere game, you have to take more tricks to beat it, and so have to employ different tactics. When you hold the same honor combination at the top of two different suits—such as a K-Q-J sequence—ordinarily it is best to lead the longer of the two suits against a game and the shorter against a slam, as you are more likely to find the declarer holding losing cards in your shorter suit.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♦	Pass	Pass	Dbl
2 ♦	3 ♣	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	5 ♥	Pass	6 ♥

With slight variations, that bidding came at several tables of a duplicate. Some of the declarers made the slam and others were set, the result depending entirely on what East led. Where a diamond was chosen, the contract was made, where a spade, it was nipped.

With the diamond lead, North won, ruffed the diamond 3 with the heart 2, led to the heart A and K, ruffed the diamond 6 with the heart 9, then began to run clubs. West ruffed the third one with the heart J, but his desperate spade shift fell to the A and the next two clubs brought a discard of North's second spade, so that he lost only that trump trick.

Nothing could be done to save the day for North when East led his spade K. The A was knocked out at once, so that, as soon as the heart J won a trick, the setting spade could be scored. North had no trouble ruffing out his diamonds, taking two hearts and then leading clubs; but it was impossible to discard the spade loser before West made his ruffing trick and then switched to the spade which settled the issue.

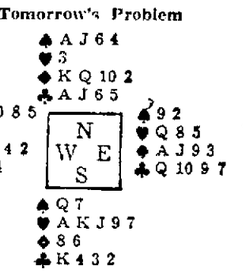
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. North - South vulnerable.)

After East leads the spade 9, the suit bid by his partner in response to a terrifically shaded double, how should North plan to play this deal to make an extra trick at 3-No Trumps?

CLUB WOMEN HEAR TALKS ON OHIOANS

THE MEMBERS of the Victorian club enjoyed a delightful luncheon and program when Mrs. Robert S. Gibson entertained yesterday. The topic of the program "Ohio's Men and Women of Letters" was presented by Mrs. C. W. Jelliff, and Mrs. J. Clarke Custer. Mrs. Jelliff, in her unusually informative talk stated that Ohio began early to write for herself, and that she had never lacked writers either in number or in greatness. The Ohioana Library in Columbus contains at present books or pamphlets by 16,000 authors, excluding those in anthology and a growing bibliography list. There are some 3,000 more writers connected with Ohio not yet represented in the collection, though they are universally known. Everybody knows Phoebe Carry's "Nearer Home" and Daniel Emmett's "Dixie." Every type and form of writing has been cultivated in the century and a half of Ohio history. From this great field of literary endeavor Mrs. Jelliff chose to speak of Frank George Carpenter, Helen Loomis Linham and Paul Laurence Dunbar. She described Mr. Carpenter, a native of Mansfield, as a world traveler and hunter of ideas. She told of the high honor Helen Loomis Linham received for her "The Blind Girl Speaks," and and from the works of Mr. Dunbar, one of the greatest negro poets, she beautifully recited "The Boogah Man." In closing this talk of writers, with whom she seemed to have lived for weeks, she mentioned that Ohio is the only state that celebrates a poetry day by an act of legislature, the third Friday of October.

As Mrs. Custer reviewed this galaxy, she mentioned William Maxwell, the learned editor of a newspaper called "The Sentinel of the Northwestern Territory," published 10 years before Ohio became a state, and Harriett Beecher Stowe who wrote her great novel in Cincinnati. A copy of a McGuffey reader was amusingly shown. The speaker read a descriptive paragraph from Louis Broomfield's "The Farm," spoke of Charles Allen Smart of Chillicothe and closed with a colorful and amusing reading from a book by Claire MacMurray.

A quotation from a chapter in Dr. Harlan Hatcher's book "Buckeye Country" which reads "for in letters as in politics, commerce and geography, Ohio is as she always has been, alive and verile as the crossroads of the nation," closed the program.

The next meeting is to be a 1 o'clock luncheon at the Women's Club on Nov. 9 with Mrs. C. H. Huston the hostess.

Cheer Up, Gals, New Rayon Stockings Aren't So Bad!

By DOROTHY ROE
Wide World Fashion Editor

Dear Miss or Mrs. USA: You might just as well stop lamenting your dear-departed silk and nylon stockings, because that's all there is, there isn't any more

The thing to do now is dry those tears, get a firm grip on yourself and prepare to be surprised at the progress that has been made in improving rayon stockings. From now on, you know, you're going to be wearing rayons whether you like it or not, unless you prefer to paint your legs—and that still seems a trifle chilly for winter. You may, of course, adopt heavy ribbed and mesh wools and cottons for sports and country wear, but you'll still need rayons for dress. So you'd better learn how to get the most for your money.

Insist On Fit.

In the first place, you must remember that it's most important to buy the correct foot size and leg length in rayon hosiery—it hasn't as much elasticity as silk or nylon, and to look well it must fit perfectly. When rayon stretches it stays stretched until it's washed, so if your foot is slender, you probably will take a half size smaller than you have been buying in nylon. For the same reason, avoid too-long hose, and be sure you buy stockings with a deep double welt or adjustable top, to give you leeway for tightening your garters, if necessary.

Make sure that the stockings have sufficient reinforcement at toe, heel and sole. Many rayon stockings have cotton reinforcements at toe and heel If your feet perspire, it is wise to buy these, as rayon is weakened when damp.

Dry Thoroughly.

Rayon stockings, like all others, give better service if they are washed immediately after wearing Don't try to wash rayon hose at night and wear them the next morning Buy enough so that you can alternate wear, and allow two full days for the stockings to become thoroughly dry after washing

In selecting the weight you desire in the new rayon hose, you will have to learn a new set of terms, different from those used in describing silk. Sheerness in silk stockings was determined by the number of threads twisted together to make the knitting yarn —2-thread was very sheer, 3-thread slightly heavier, and so on. In rayon stockings, a single thread of selected size determines the sheerness. The term used to denote the thread size is "denier," pronounced "den-yer." A given length of 50-denier thread would weigh 50 ounces, the same length of 75-denier thread would weigh 75 ounces. The higher the denier, the heavier the weight of the stocking. These comparisons will help when you are buying rayon hose:

50 denier rayon is comparable in sheerness to 3 to 4 thread in silk.

75 denier rayon—5 to 6 thread silk.

100 denier rayon—7 thread silk.

The size of the knitting stitch also contributes to the weight and sheerness. This factor is defined as "gauge" and is used in connection with rayons in exactly the same way as it was with silk. A 45-gauge is standard, 42-gauge is used in heavier stockings and extra-sheer stockings are knit in fine gauge, 48 or 51.

One of the biggest improvements in rayon stockings has been achieved by increasing the twist of the yarn, to give the desired dull, crepey appearance and improve resistance to snagging. Laboratory tests show that high-twist rayon stockings snag less readily than most silks.

So cheer up—the new rayon stockings are going to surprise you with their good points.

Girl Scouts Shine 'Em Up For Victory Fund Drive

By VIVIAN BROWN
(Wide World Features Writer)

Pop's shoes are going to be shined — but regularly — and daughter is the new bootblack!

As a matter of fact, the old homestead will be a beehive of activity for the next few weeks. And all because the Girl Scouts are having a Victory Fund drive.

Each of the nation's 725,830 Girl Scouts is purchasing at least one 25-cent War Savings Stamp in addition to what she normally buys, and this stamp will be given to the fund.

Daughter has to earn some money. So, that's the reason for the elbow grease. Ma's kitchen looks spic and span; little brother's socks are being darned, and baby is well taken care of. Windows are so shiny you can use 'em for mirrors!

One troop on Staten Island, N. Y., sold rubber salvage. Another troop in Santa Barbara, Calif., sold candy, made $150 and sent it to the Girl Scouts in Hawaii, of whom there are about 5,000. Another idea was to charge admission of one War Savings Stamp to the Harvest Exhibit, the Girl Scout Victory Gardens display.

Some of these little Scouts walk or roller-skate to school, saving bus fare, do without chewing gum, candy and sundry other things, in order to swell the fund.

For even if each Scout buys just one stamp at 25 cents, $180,000 will be realized No contributions are solicited from the public. Each girl gives her stamps to a troop leader, who sends them to national headquarters to be converted into War Bonds. Then, the bonds will be held in trust and the money used to help children anywhere in the world who have suffered from the war.

The relief fund for Girl Scouts in China is now sent directly to Mme Chiang Kai-shek and is at her disposal to be used for needy children as she directs.

The motto for the campaign is "A loan to the Government and a Gift to the Children of the World."
